Merit System Spread to All Postmasters By Roosevelt

13,730 Jobs Removed From 'Plum' Class by Executive Order.

Highest in Test Must Be Named

Action Is Called Reply to Landon; O'Mahoney Praises Action.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt last night issued an executive order moving first, second and third class postmasterships into the Civil Service as vacancies appear, thus removing from the political arena the widest field of patronage plums in the Government.

There are 13,730 jobs in the three categories, divided thus: First class, 1,007; second class, 3,154; third class, 9,659. These posts traditionally have been handed out on a basis of party loyalty since the United States began mail service.

The order was signed by the President Monday night and released at the White House last night, in conjunction with a letter from Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, (Democrat), of Wyoming, praising the move.

The order made clear the President's intention to separate the Postoffice Department's jobs from charges of political favoritism, requiring that as rapidly as vacancies occur, Civil Service examinations must be held, with the appointee having the highest grade receiving the office, regardless of his political beliefs.

At the same time it appeared that should the Republicans win the election there would be little chance of them replacing the many Democrats now holding postmasterships with men of their own choosing. The executive order provides in case of a vacancy the Postmaster General may recommend appointment of the incumbent or promotion of a classified postal employe if either of them has been found eligible by the Civil Service Commission.

The only alternative open to the Postmaster General is calling upon the Civil Service Commission to hold an open competitive examination, from the results of which the Postmaster General shall submit to the President for appointment the name of the highest eligible.

Observers noted political significance in the President's action, when coupled with the telegram sent by Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland the night of his nomination, in which he outlined a plan very similar to that ordered by the President last night.

In that telegram Gov. Landon said, in commenting on the party's platform pledge for the merit system:

"In carrying out this pledge I believe that there should be included within the merit system every position in the administrative service below the rank of assistant secretaries of major departments and agencies, and that this inclusion should cover the entire Postoffice Department."

May Ask Examination.

With fourth-class postmasterships already in the civil service, the act of the President may serve to a large extent to cut down the basis of the Republican charges of "Farleyism" in the Administration, although, on the other hand, it may give reason for assertions that the President had been forced to the move by Gov. Landon's action.

Senator O'Mahoney, former First Assistant Postmaster General, charges that Republican members in the House in the recent session blocked legislation which would have accomplished the same end.

He said:

"I know that you would have preferred the enactment of a statute definitely placing all postmasterships within the Civil Service law. That was the hope which actuated you at the beginning of the Administration, when you sought an agreement with Congressional leaders of both parties. It was the hope you expressed to Postmaster General Farley and myself in July, 1933, when you directed the preparation of legislation placing all post-

On Guard to Prevent Plotted Bombing

Legation of Hungary Guarded After Bomb Plot Is Uncovered

Capital Stations Policemen at Both Chancery and Residence as Reprisals Are Feared for Execution of Radical by Country.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A reported plot to assassinate Hungarian Minister John Pelenyi and members of his staff by bombing the legation chancery at 1424 Sixteenth street northwest was revealed here last night.

Although a 24-hour police watch has been assigned to both the chancery and legation at 1704 Eighteenth street northwest, and authorities admit an undercover investigation is being conducted, the entire affair has remained a closely-guarded secret for five days.

Minister Pelenyi and his family are en route to Hungary. Legation attaches here are frankly alarmed, describing the alleged plot as a Communist reprisal for the recent execution of a Red agitator in Budapest.

A tenant in the Sixteenth street apartment house where the legation maintains fourth-floor offices was credited with exposing the reported plot. Authorities are withholding the informant's name.

It was learned, however, that the reputed plotters were overheard discussing plans during an early morning rendezvous in an alley behind the apartment building.

The plotters' meeting—early last week—followed attempts by a local

U. S. to Present Spy Evidence To Jury Today

Farnsworth Case Action Follows Rumor Charge Would Be Dropped.

Moving swiftly on the heels of a report that it would drop espionage charges against John S. Farnsworth, former lieutenant commander of the United States Navy, the district attorney's office yesterday afternoon announced a grand jury hearing for this morning.

Evidence that Farnsworth delivered confidential Navy information to officials of the Japanese government will be laid before the jury at 10 a. m. in the courthouse, United States District Attorney Leslie Garnett said.

The announcement was made suddenly. The decision to bring the Government's newest spy investigation before a grand jury without delay was considered a dramatic answer to the prediction of a widely known radio commentator Tuesday night.

The commentator, it was reported, said he had information that the department lacked evidence for its case against Farnsworth, would drop it quietly, and would do so without going before a grand jury.

The district attorney followed his decision to call the grand jury session this morning with a hurry-up call to his assistant, Samuel F. Beach, who was on vacation at Cape Cod, Mass.

Beach reached Washintgon yesterday afternoon and was instructed

Raid Discloses Vice Ring Here; 2 Women Held

Pair Accused as Leaders Give Heavy Bail in Belmont St. Case.

Two women, alleged leaders of one of the most highly organized white-slave rings ever operated in the District, were arrested early yesterday and arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. They were released for grand-jury action under heavy bond.

The prisoners—Mary Hipple, 31, white, and Ida Jackson, colored—were charged with violating sections of the white slave law, and the Jackson woman also was charged with pandering. Mrs. Hipple, whose aliases included "Mary Sherman" and "Mary Cantentella," furnished $10,000 bond, while bond set for the Jackson woman was $5,000.

Both were arrested with two other women and a man, who were not charged. Vice squad policemen and Federal agents, it was revealed last night, swooped down on a house in the 1400 block Belmont street, which they had been watching for some time.

On Monday night, asserted Patrolman Roy E. Blick, one of the raiders, he arrested a girl in a downtown hotel, and, after questioning, she said she wanted to "tell all she knew about this white slave racket."

"I am one of Mary Hipple's girls," she told the policeman, he said.

Then she asserted she had lived

Box Found in Atlantic Believed Wreckage From Missing Ship

By the United Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., July 22.—A smashed flour box labeled "Cayman" salvaged from the blue waters of the Gulf Stream south of Florida, tonight apparently sealed the fate of the 22 men, women and children believed lost with the British motorship Nunoca.

The box, picked up at 3 p. m. by the Coast Guard cutter Vigilant 2 miles east of Conch Reef in the Florida Straits, was the first strong evidence that the ill-fated vessel had gone down.

The Nunoca had cleared Georgetown, Gran Cayman, July 4, and never again was reported. It was believed almost certain that her crew of 9 and 13 pasengers had lost their lives.

From flotsam salvaged from the sea, officers aboard one of the greatest Coast Guard flotillas assembled off Florida in years attempted tonight to piece together details of the fate of the Nunoca and the 22 men, women and children who apparently perished with her.

Earlier, the Vigilant had salvaged two oil drums—Texas Co. drums—similar to cargo lashed to the deck of the 110-foot vessel when she cleared Georgetown for Tampa 18 days ago. Until the flour box was found, however, the officers had not stronger evidence than similarity of type of the drums to back their belief the Nunoca had foundered or had been destroyed by an explosion.

The latest discovery was made in the dangerous shoal section where the liner Dixie went aground during the Labor Day hurricane of 1935.

100,000 to See Landon Open Drive Today

Republicans Flock to Topeka for Acceptance Speech.

Address Already in Type, Nominee Pursues a Calm Routine.

By Franklyn Waltman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Topeka, Kans., July 22.—Thousands of Republicans from every State in the Union were pouring into Topeka today and tonight to hear Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, enunciate in specific terms his political philosophy tomorrow night in the form of an acceptance speech.

With its main avenues gaily decorated with flags, bunting and huge lithograhpic photographs of Gov. Landon, this prairie State capital set about the task of playing host to the largest crowd, by far, ever to enter its boundaries.

A total of 33 special trains, bringing State groups from every region of the country, was bound here tonight. Meanwhile, automobile caravans entered this city of 70,000 residents in a steady stream. It is estimated that more than 100,000 visitors will be in Topeka. How this small city will house and feed such a gathering appeared to be an insolvable problem, since all hotel space was already occupied with but a fraction of that number here.

Mammoth Parade Today.

But none seemed to worry about that. All thoughts were on the activities of tomorrow, when a mammoth parade, including innumerable bands, Indian tribes, covered wagons, ancient automobiles and thousands of marchers, each wearing a Landon sunflower, will be held.

But more important, the thoughts of the Republican clans gathering here were on the acceptance speech which Gov. Landon makes tomorrow night, a speech which by radio will be carried into every city and hamlet of the country. On the context and presentation of that speech, many Republicans believed, depend the prospects for victory this fall.

But apparently unruffled—certainly not nervous—over the importance of tomorrow night's address was Gov. Landon. His speech was written and had been printed tonight—too late for any change, even if a change were desired. So far as he was concerned, the die had been cast after many weeks of consultation and of tugging by this or that faction within his party.

The Governor not only pursued a calm routine during the day, but he concentrated for a part of the day on State business. With hundreds of visiting Republicans milling around his office and the statehouse, Gov. Landon spent part of the day conferring with the State tax commission, the State corporation commission and the State board of administration, the last an agency devoted to Kansas welfare problems.

The purpose of these conferences was the formulation of data for the fixing of a State tax levy which must be assessed next month. Twice during the day the Governor turned aside from State business to hold press conferences. Half-a-hundred out-of-State newspaper correspondents were here, many of them anxious to get their first glimpse of the Republican nominee. He talked genially, easily with them, but he had no news that concerned them. He was reserving that for his acceptance speech.

Wife Is Equally Calm.

With his coat off, in a neat white shirt and white linen trousers, Gov. Landon frequently slipped from his office to shake hands with the Republicans who crowded every inch of his office. He shook the hand of a man unknown to him as he did that of a national committeeman on whose State the election might turn.

Meanwhile, equally as calm and lacking in nervousness was the youthful Mrs. Landon, who held her really first press conference. Once before she faced representatives of the press, but on that occasion the questioners were few and chiefly women. Today she faced more men than women, including many of the Washington correspondents who twice a week attend the President's conferences. To them it was a novelty, for they are barred from Mrs. Roosevelt's conferences.

Mrs. Landon declined to discuss current issues; said she would not accompany her husband on his campaign tours; indicated she believed him fully capable of speaking for

Baseballer Is Wed In Ball Park With Aid of Amplifiers

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., July 22.—Robert K. "Bobby" Loane, 21-year-old outfielder of Albany's International League Club, went to home plate a bachelor tonight and came away with a bride and a brand new automobile.

Speaking their vows over an amplifying system that let a baseball crowd of 7,500 in on the ceremony, he and Miss Barbara Welch Berg, 18, of Oakland, Calif., his hometown sweetheart, were married under the lights of Hawkins Stadium.

The automobile, a small coupe, was the gift of the club and was pressed into immediate service for a honeymoon that ends tomorrow night. Loane must be back on deck for a doubleheader with Rochester.

Al Maumaux, Albany manager, gave the bride away. Just before the ceremony he sang, "It's a Sin to Tell a Lie." An orchestra vocalist followed with "I Love You Truly."

American Woman Wounded, U. S. Citizens Flee to Embassy After Spain Warns of Danger Food Shortage Feared; Firm Is Asked to Send Ship to Barcelona.

Word of Bowers' Safety Is Lacking

The Spanish Revolt.

An unidentified American woman was wounded in fighting near Madrid yesterday. The State Department asked a private shipping company to assist in evacuating United States citizens from Barcelona.

The crucial battle of the insurrection was reported close at hand as Madrid mobilized to meet the expected attack of two armies of 50,000 rebels converging on the capital. Gen. Emilio Molas' troops were believed to be less than 35 miles from the city. On the radio Mola said the fall of Madrid was "imminent."

British authorities warned the commanders of Spanish warships that if any more shells fell on Gibraltar, the artillery of the fortress would return the fire.

The government created Communist committees to guide its defense and claimed capture of Toledo and other towns in Albacete Province after battles.

Rebel planes bombed loyalist ships near Gibraltar, the government group answering with sharp fire. Buildings in Gibraltar were damaged and the populace was in terror.

There was rioting and bloodshed in Barcelona, now in the hands of the Loyalists. Leftist planes bombed Saragossa, in the north.

U. S. Woman Shot.

By Felix Bruner.

Wounding of an American woman in Spain and multiplying reports of serious danger to Americans in that country led the State Department last night to take immediate steps to remove citizens of the United States from the danger zone.

Without waiting for the arrival of warships, ordered to Spanish waters, Secretary Hull asked a private shipping concern to assist in rescuing refugees. The American Export Line was asked to order the S. S. Exeter, due in Marseilles, France, today, to proceed immediately to Barcelona to take Americans aboard.

The request followed refusal of Spanish officials to guarantee the safety of Americans in that city and at Malaga. Several hundred United States citizens are listed as being in Barcelona.

Identity Not Revealed.

The identity of the woman, who was injured in street fighting northwest of Madrid, was not revealed in messages to the department.

Americans in the Spanish capital were gathering in the United States embassy there as conditions grew continuously worse. Eric C. Wedelin, third secretary of the embassy, who is in charge, telegraphed the State Department that all known Americans had been advised in telephone messages to go to the embassy. He said there were about 100 Americans in the city. However, State Department records as of last January 1 listed 466.

A serious food shortage and imminent danger that the water supply of Madrid would be cut off added to the problem.

Wendelin reported the embassy had enough food to feed five persons 100 days. On the basis of 100 Americans who might gather at the embassy, this would be less than two days' supply.

"Tonight the city is quiet but ominous," the message said. "There is fear that irresponsible youths may start searching houses at any moment, putting people in considerable danger."

The American woman was shot, according to Wendelin, at Guadarrama, about 50 kilometers northwest of Madrid. He said he had been asked to bring her to the city but that he had no way of doing so.

Refugees were asked to bring with them to the embassy food for at least one meal, if possible.

"The food supply in Madrid is reported to be practically exhausted," the message said. "There is considerable concern over the water

Notables Open Ancient Farm, All-Electrified

Ickes Throws Switch Setting Gadgets in Motion Near Herndon, Va.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday stood on the porch of a Virginia farmstead whose acres have been under cultivation since the time of George Washington and threw a switch which set into motion enough electrical appliances and gadgets to make the farm the most completely electrified rural unit in the United States.

Behind Ickes beamed Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hughes, middle-aged owners of the ultra-modern place, the Rosedale Dairy Farm, near Herndon, Va. On the lawn in front of the Secretary of the Interior sat about 200 neighbors of the Hughes family, officials of the Rural Electrification Administration and representatives of power companies.

Notables Are Guests.

As he threw the switch on the REA's model farm, Ickes expressed the hope "that it symbolizes another forward step in the marshaling and prudent use of all resources for the present and future benefit of our Nation."

"I hope that city people as well as country people will visit this place to learn of the improvement and progress made possible by power," he added.

Gov. Peery of Virginia, REA Administrator Morris L. Cooke, Basil Manly, of the Federal Power Commission, and Representative Howard W. Smith, in whose district the farm is situated, were among the guests.

The farm will be an exhibit for the 3,000 foreign and American engineers at the World Power Conference in Washington September 7 to 12, and will be open to the public certain hours daily for the next 12 months.

"On Eve of New Era."

Cooke explained that the electrical equipment on the Rosedale Dairy Farm, complete to ultra-violet ray lamps for the chickens and electric fly-swatters for the milk house, cost approximately $5,000, exclusive of the power line.

Both Ickes and Cooke declared that, through the availability of

Rebel Force of 50,000 Troops Reported Marching on Madrid

Vanguard Is Within 35 Miles of Capital, Gen. Mola Says; Decisive Battle With Loyalists Is Believed Imminent.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, July 22.—The vanguard of 50,000 rebel troops was within 35 miles of Madrid tonight, it was announced officially at the Burgos headquarters of Gen. Emilio Mola, commander of rebel forces in northern Spain.

Two powerful forces closed in on the Spanish capital from north and south and a decisive battle on which the fate of the government may hang was believed imminent.

A battle for possession of Madrid began today at Villa Alba, 15 miles from the capital, the London Daily Mail reported from Cerbere, Franco-Spanish frontier.

The dispatch said Gen. Mola would throw his forces into action against Madrid within the next 24 months. Meanwhile, rebel forces sent in advance of Mola's main army have engaged government supporters at Villa Alba.

The Daily Mail said another rebel column arrived at Buitrago and clashed with government forces 36 miles from Madrid. It was reported that 165,000 Loyalists, including

Roosevelt Asks Drought Study By New Group

President Appoints Cooke to Head Great Plains Area Committee.

Calling for a comprehensive study looking, apparently, to wide changes in the use of land in the central portion of the country, President Roosevelt yesterday created a Great Plains Drought Area Committee and instructed the members to report to him next month when he is making his personal inspection of the devastated farm sections.

Named as chairman of the committee was Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator. Other members are Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator; Rexford Guy Tugwell, resettlement administrator; John C. Page, acting director of the Bureau of Reclamation; Col. Richard C. Moore, Engineers Corps, U. S. A., at Kansas City, and Frederick H. Fowler, director of the drainage basin study of the National Resources Committee.

Within a few hours after the President's action was announced, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was proposing in an address at

Chicago Blast Wrecks Plant; Worker Killed

Walls Fall With a Roar; 8 Employes Injured; Fire Delays Search.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 22.—A terrific explosion and fire today crumpled the National Fur Dressing and Dyeing Co.'s plant into a heap of bricks and girders, killing one woman and injuring eight other employes.

Salvage workers toiled over the hot ruins tonight, but police said all occupants of the plant were accounted for. The dead woman was Mrs. Sylvia Rifkin.

Two women and four men employes were burned, and a bystander and two firemen were injured as flames raged through the wreckage in the wake of the blast.

Long after the structure collapsed, firemen continued to pour water into the ruins, still too hot to permit a thorough search for bodies.

The factory, on North Halsted street, consisted of two floors and a basement, with a frontage of 40 feet and a depth of 125.

Walls and roof collapsed with a roar, piling bricks 10 feet into Halsted street and blocking traffic for 2 miles in either direction.

Tangled electric wires and dense smoke from furs and cleaning materials prevented firemen for some time from searching the wreckage. Salvage squads were summoned when the flames were finally checked and they attacked the ruins.

Determining that the explosion originated at the rear of the building and threw its force toward the street, blowing out the front wall, Fire Chief Michael J. Corrigan ordered an investigation to determine the cause.

He assigned men to learn if inflammable fluids were used in cleaning the furs. Some employes told Police Captain Andrew Barry vegetable oils and compounds which included sawdust were used for that purpose.

Workmen estimated about 20 persons were in the plant when the blast leveled it, many of the day shift having left for their homes.

Injured employes included Dominick Collici, 55; Jerome Levin, 37; George Lazzarotto, 19; John Gorz, 28; Mrs. Gussie Saks, 40, and Miss Shirley Stuybel, 29. Miss Sylvia Barron and Miss Ruth Katz.

2 Boys Run to Greet Father, Lose Footing, Killed by Truck

Two youngsters—sons of a Prince Georges County farmer—were crushed to death beneath the wheels of their father's produce truck near Clinton, Md., yesterday.

Eager to greet their father when he returned from a trip "to town," James and Walter Burch, 4 and 6 respectively, darted from their farmhouse yard and leaped to the side of his truck.

The father, Joseph Allen Burch, attempted to slow the vehicle down when he saw the children coming. But it was too late. The boys jumped to the running board, lost their footing and plunged beneath the moving truck.

Burch brought his car to a screeching stop and looked back. His sons were lying in the roadway —mangled by the truck's rear wheels.

Frantically, the father ran to their aid. He reached them just before his wife, who had been working in a nearby field and witnessed the tragedy.

Together, they carried the boys into the house and summoned Dr. James I. Beyds, of Forestville, Md. He pronounced James and Walter dead a few minutes later. Both children suffered fractured skulls, he said.

Acting Coroner James Anderson, of Upper Marlboro, said an inquest would not be necessary, but set a hearing date for Burch July 29.

Both parents said "things happened so quickly" they didn't realize what had occurred until they saw their children lying in the road.

Fred S. Purnell To Pilot G. O. P. Speech Bureau

Former Representative, of Attica, Ind., Named by Hamilton.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 22.—Appointment of former Representative Fred S. Purnell, of Attica, Ind., as head of the speaking bureau of the Republican National Committee was announced today by John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman.

Hamilton said Purnell would take charge of the bureau about Labor Day. In the meantime, he said, the office will remain in charge of A. K. Barta, Washington lawyer, who will be Purnell's administrative assistant.

Barta said he had a tentative list of 600 Republican speakers who will operate in the 29 States of the national committee's Western dvision.

Barta said Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, would be one of the headliners in the Western campaign.

Young "T. R." to Speak.

He said the talent booked included Mrs. Ruth Hanna Simms, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., former Representative at Large from Illinois, and Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, son of the late President.

Frank A. Taggart, of Massilon, Ohio, national committeeman for Ohio, and Edward Schorr, of Cincinnati, Republican State chairman, visited Milton Hamilton today en route to Topeka, Kans., for the Landon notification ceremonies. Taggart said he told Hamilton Ohio would go Republican by at least 100,000 votes in the November election.

Hamilton said he would remain in Topeka a day after the notification ceremonies tomorrow to talk over with Gov. Alf M. Landon the latter's speaking tour as Republican Presidential nominee.

Murphy Sees Victory.

New York, July 22 (AP).—Frank Murphy, Governor General of the Philippines and a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Michigan, today predicted President Roosevelt would carry Michigan in November.

Murphy made his prediction at Democratic national headquarters a few hours after Gov. Richard W. Leche of Louisiana told Chairman James A. Farley the State political organization built by the late Huey P. Long "will go along with President Roosevelt 100 per cent."

At Republican headquarters, Henry W. Jeffers, sr., New Jersey State chairman, said Gov. Alf M. Landon would carry his State by a plurality of 250,000. In 1932 the Democrats carried New Jersey by 30,000 votes.

"Tough Fight" in Florida.

John P. Harris, Republican national committeeman from Florida, said the Republicans "have a chance in Florida, but it will be a tough fight."

Jeffers and Harris were here to discuss campaign plans with Representative Joseph W. Martin, manager of the Republican campaign in the East. Mrs. Edna Conklin, national committeewoman from New Jersey, also conferred with Martin.

Both Murphy and Leche said the Union Party, backed by Father Coughlin, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith and Dr. Francis E. Townsend, would not influence the election in their States.

Murphy said Father Coughlin had a substantial following in Michigan, but added:

"I do not believe the Lemke ticket will be strong in Michigan or any other State. It will not affect the situation."

His Influence Scouted.

Gov. Leche, who was one of Senator Long's aids, said the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, Long's associate in the share-the-wealth movement, "undoubtedly still has some personal following in Louisiana." He added, however, that Smith would wield no political influence in the election.

Murphy, stopping here en route to Washington to discuss matters concerning the Philippines, said:

"I think the chances for a Democratic victory in Michigan are excellent. The workers in Detroit and other labor centers of the State, which make up about 60 per cent of the population, are from 80 to 90 per cent for President Roosevelt.

"They are for the President because they think he and his Administration are responsive to the Nation's changing social and economic needs."

Farley said he would go to Washington Thursday and return to New York Friday night.

Martin planned to listen to Gov. Landon's acceptance speech tomorrow night at his home at North Attleboro, Mass., where he will remain over the week-end.

French Rightists Replace Strikers

Paris, July 22 (AP).—The Rightist Peasant Front tonight mobilized an army of peasants to replace striking farm hands in the fight against France's agricultural strike.

Henri Dorgeres, Peasant Front leader, declared "the French peasants are capable of fighting their own battles against foreign agitators who started the farm strike."

Labor also threw its support to the government in an attempt to induce the striking farmhands to return to work before the wheat harvest.

Leon Jouhaux, president of the labor confederation, denied organized labor had called a general farm strike in sympathy with the local Farmworker's Union in more than four departments.

He requested the workers to "keep calm."

A fresh refusal to work by 4,000 shoe factory employes at Valence and 8,000 others in a soup factory outside Paris swelled the strikers' ranks to more than 82,000.

Wife and Family of Candidate Are Important to Voters During Campaign.

By Franklyn Waltman

TOPEKA, Kans., July 22.—The wife and family of a candidate for the Presidency should not be a political issue—indeed should not figure one way or another in the consideration of the electorate. But it would be to bury one's head in the sand to say that they do not. They frequently become important factors in the outcome of political contests.

WALTMAN.

Undoubtedly many voters, particularly socially minded women, will vote this fall for President Roosevelt because they like and admire Mrs. Roosevelt. At the same time many voters—chiefly men, as far as I can observe—will be influenced in voting against Mr. Roosevelt because of Mrs. Roosevelt's activities.

Seldom has so much national attention been paid to the wife of a President as to Mrs. Roosevelt. She has interested herself in national problems and on occasion has stated her views, thus breaking precedent which has dictated that such matters should be left, at least publicly, to her husband. Mrs. Roosevelt frequently makes public addresses and daily recounts her daily routine in a syndicated news column.

As she has emerged into atcive participation in public life she has been treated more and more as a public figure, being subjected to praise and criticism, drawing the sting of the cartoonist and the jokesmith. For instance, within the last month I have heard the following jest repeated in Cleveland, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago and in Topeka:

A friend greets another with the words: "Do you know who is the wife of the President of Switzerland?"

"No, I don't," you say.

"That is the way it should be in this country," dryly remarks your friend.

All of this is a preface, demonstrating that the wife of the President is a factor in this campaign, to a recital of a press conference held today by Mrs. Alf M. Landon, wife of the Republican nominee. There is no doubt that many persons in many places will undertake to compare Mrs. Landon with Mrs. Roosevelt, and the result will influence the way they vote.

Mrs. Landon is 37 years old, but looks three or four years younger. She is a college graduate, regarded as talented and has an interest in music and literature. The daughter of a Topeka banker, she was married to Gov. Landon in 1930. He is 12 years her senior. The press conference which Mrs. Landon had today, the second in her life, was arranged at request of the half-a-hundred newspaper correspondents here for the Landon notification ceremonies.

This conference took place in the drawing room of the architecturally grotesque house erected in the late 90's—"late Bismarckian architecture," Henry L. Mencken termed it—which is called the "Governor's House." It is apparent that the house does not accurately reflect the quiet, simple tastes of the Landons.

Of more than ordinary attractiveness, Mrs. Landon has wavy, brown hair, tinged slightly with gray; luminous, dark, expressive eyes; an engaging smile which brings into play two dimples. She wore today a simple gown of ice-blue, wash satin.

She entered her press conference, undoubtedly the most formidable group she has ever encountered, unaccompanied except for the Governor's press representative, H. Ross Bartley who retired as soon as he had introduced her to each of those present.

Mrs. Landon must have felt some nervousness. Here were several score strange, quizzical, critical eyes peering at her. Their judgment of her would have some influence on their judgment of her husband. But if she felt nervous she did not display it. She was as calm and poised as though she were entering her family circle.

Incidentally, newspapermen never attend Mrs. Roosevelt's press conferences. They have been specifically barred. Only accredited newspaperwomen are admitted. The presence of men at this conference, including such critics of the American scene as Henry L. Mencken and Frank R. Kent, was the cause of comment on the part of the newspaperwomen from Washington.

I do not know whether Mrs. Landon has been coached for this press conference. I doubt it because it was arranged on the spur of the moment. But whether it was prearranged or is part of Mrs. Landon's genuine personality, she appears today as much the antithesis of Mrs. Roosevelt as is her husband the antithesis of the President.

I know I am beginning to tread on dangerous ground and that when I return to Washington I undoubtedly shall meet a barrage of questions to the general effect that "Oh, so, you believe that woman's place is in the kitchen."

I do not. I believe it is in the drawing room, and, may I add, the women in Washington with the greatest effect on determining public questions are those who shun the spotlight. Perhaps I am old-fashioned—perhaps Mrs. Landon is adhering to campaign policy rather than her instinctive dictates. But the impression she left on me was this:

Here was a woman willing to leave expression of attitude on public questions to her husband. Here was a woman whose primary interest, it appeared, was her home and the part of a charming companion to her husband. Here was a woman calm and charming, without a restless, burning zeal to undo all the wrongs in the world and to solve all the social problems which have baffled men for generations. I like her—would like to have her as a dinner companion.

This is best illustrated by Mrs. Landon's answer to the questions propounded to her.

"Do you ever make speeches?" asked a woman journalist.

"I do not have to now—the Governor makes them," replied Mrs. Landon.

"Have you made speeches?"

"Oh, yes," with a smile. (Incidentally she made one last night, breaking the ground for a new Delta Gamma Sorority house at Washburn College here, of which she is a graduate. The complete text of her address was: "This structure symbolizes the finest ideals of Delta Gamma, may it stand for a home for beauty and honor, character and culture." What more need she have said?)

"Shall you accompany the Governor on his campaign trips?"

"No," with a smile and a flash of dimples. "I am not news."

"Don't you think the American people would like to see you?"

"I don't know," Mrs. Landon replied, and then indicating she does have a mind of her own, she added: "But they won't."

"Are you not interested in politics?"

"Oh, yes; my husband is actively engaged in politics."

"At your press conferences don't you discuss public questions?"

"Until my husband was nominated for the Presidency I never held a press conference—this is only my second."

This is a good sample of the exchange of questions and answers. Most of the conference, however, had to do with the gowns which Mrs. Landon and Peggy Ann, the daughter by the Governor's first wife, 19, would wear tomorrow night—and with purely social arrangements. It was rather refreshing—at least to this man—to talk about "salmon-rose French chiffon redingote over white crepe with a high neck and slightly modified bell-sleeves, under a gown of field flowers, light green marquisette."

London, July 22 (AP).—The London social season moved to a close tonight with the second garden reception of debutantes by King Edward.

Seated under a silken canopy in the grounds of Buckingham Palace, the British monarch received a second groups of smartly gowned women. Presentation ceremonies yesterday were rained out after half of the 500 waiting guests had been announced by the lord chamberlain.

To Hire Only Mutes.

Warrenton, Va., July 22 (AP).—John L. R. Gaines, owner of a small woodworking plant here, today said he intended to employ only mutes in enlarging his pay roll. They are better workmen, faster and "lose little time," the owner declared. His present staff includes four mutes.

Steel Campaign To Be Widened By Lewis Bloc

C.I.O. Spokesmen Studying Unionization of 40,000 Aluminum Workers.

Twelve insurgent union leaders, facing possible suspension from the American Federation of Labor, last night disclosed their drive in the steel industry had been broadened to embrace 1,000,000 workers and said a campaign to organize 40,000 aluminum employes was being considered.

The twin objectives were announced 24 hours after the "rebels" as members of the Committee for Industrial Organization, challenged the power of the federation's executive council to punish them by refusing to appear before the group on August 3 to stand trial on charges of fomenting "insurrection" and "dual unionism."

The C. I. O. unionists originally set aside $500,000 to unionize 500,000 steel workers. Philip Murray, generalissimo of the campaign, said yesterday, however, that campaign plans had been revised to include approximately 500,000 additional workers in steel processing and fabricating plants. This was done, he said, at the request of "a large number" of employes in these factories.

Trained labor experts, Murray added, now are making a careful survey of the aluminum industry and a decision on whether the C. I. O. forces will attempt to unionize these workers will await a report of the investigators.

"We are exploring that possibility now," Murray said.

He asserted the steel drive was proceeding "satisfactorily." Membership in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, one of the five original A. F. of L. unions which deserted to the C. I. O. camp, is increasing steadily, he added.

Renewing his charges that many steel mills have become "armed camps" since the organization campaign began, Murray charged the Carnegie-Illinois Co., a subsidiary of United States Steel Corporation had employed 40 special deputy sheriffs in Alleghany County, Pa. He said this was done to cope with the C. I. O. drive. Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar, in Pittsburgh, admitted the company had employed special deputies, but said this was done a year ago, had no connection with the union drive and insisted the deputies were under his jurisdiction.

Deadlock Unbroken.

Meantime, leaders of the warring factions within the federation clung stubbornly to their positions which forced the first serious break in labor's "united front" in nearly 60 years.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and chairman of the C. I. O., said the letter which he and his aids sent President William Green, of the federation, yesterday, in which they challenged the authority of the council to punish them, "speaks for itself." He declined further comment, but it was plain he and his colleagues are determined that if peace is to come again to labor's ranks the federation must yield.

A few block away, Green kept his silence. He has demanded disbandment of the C. I. O. as the minimum concession which the federation's executive council can accept from Lewis and his aids. He refused to predict the action of the council when it meets on August 3 to "try" the C. I. O. unionists, but has not denied reports that a majority of the group favors immediate suspension of the "rebels."

Agreement Signed.

Pittsburgh, July 22 (AP).—Employe representatives of five plants in the Pittsburgh district of the American Steel & Wire Co. signed a statement today expressing satisfaction with the employe representation plan. They claim to represent 5,100 employes.

The statement said the employe representation plan "has ben an effective means of collective bargaining with the management."

'Branded' Girl Held In Bonus Robbery

Baltimore, July 22 (AP).—A grand jury returned a larceny presentment today against Margaret Louise Bell, alias Jean Bell, who recently reported to Washington police she had been attacked and "branded" by men she believed to be members of the Charles (Lucky) Luciano vice gang of New York.

The charge in the presentment is that she robbed Phillip R. Davis, a World War veteran, now in the Mount Alto Hospital, Washington, of $700 while they were at a hotel here.

The presentment in effect is a recommendation that a bill of indictment be drawn for the jury to act upon. Usually, under the Maryland law, the indictment follows as a matter of course.

Davis came here to testify before the grand jury and later returned to the hospital. He said the money he lost was his bonus.

The Washington police have been holding the Bell woman, awaiting the action of the grand jury here.

T. O. Larson, stockman, getting 9,048 votes in 777 precincts for the Republican Senatorial nomination, to 6,586 for L. Ray Carroll, his closest opponent.

Frank A. Hazelbaker, stockman, leading for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Jerry O'Connell apparent winner of the Democratic nomination for Congressman, First District. H. L. Hart, Republican, was unopposed.

James T. O'Connor apparently is the Democratic nominee in the Second District, with the Republicans in a neck-and-neck battle.

Roosevelt Boat Loafs in Calm In Tusket River

Judge McDermott Boards Schooner for a Chat With President.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Schooner Liberty, Off Wedgeport, N. S, July 22—A 30-mile run that required eight hours of sailing from Lower Wood Harbor brought President Roosevelt to a sheltered anchorage aboard the schooner Sewanna tonight in the Tusket River off Wedgeport, southwest Nova Scotia.

Favored by wind and tide, the sturdy little vacation craft, with the President, three sons and a brother-in-law, aboard, made the first half of the journey along the eastern shore of the Bay of Fundy in two hours.

Then the wind died down and the Sewanna became becalmed. It just loafed along the rest of the way.

On the way up the Tusket River between a group of small islands, the Sewanna and her escort craft passed a little fishing vessel which had just hauled in a 700-pound tuna. The President was anxious to catch one himself, but he probably will wait until he gets of Yarmouth, about 10 miles up the coast, before utilizing his deep-sea tackle.

Yarmouth was his destination today but he chose to enter Wedgeport Harbor to receive a visit from his friend, Judge Charles K. McDermott, of New York, who has a summer home on Comeaus Hill, west of Wedgeport. McDermott went aboard the Sewanna from a small launch and remained for a long chat.

The Sewanna took full advantage of the southeast blow this morning. She flew five sails. Warmer weather set in with the calm later in the day, permitting the President's party to doff some of their heavier clothing.

Staunton, Va., July 22 (AP).—A woman was in jail here and another person sought as Augusta County police pushed forward today their investigation of the death of Andrew Mainscupp.

Mainscupp's body, the neck broken and a large cut on the head, was found in a field in the Highland Park section Monday night. Nearby was a wrecked automobile.

Held was Susie Smith. Sheriff G. M. Gilkeson, in charge of the investigation, indicated another arrest might be made soon. He said he expected to make the arrest today.

Democrats Aid G. O. P.'s Drive, Roberts Is Told

Lesh, in Reply on Funds Solicitation, Chides His 'Rebuker.'

District Corporation Counsel William A. Roberts, Democrat, who Tuesday declined the "honor" of contributing "dues" to the Landon and Knox Campaign Club in a light-spirited letter to Paul E. Lesh, club president, yesterday was forwarded Lesh's reply.

Roberts should have known, Lesh wrote, that the letter came to you "by mistake," since it was so expressly an appeal to "loyal Republicans." The letter was one of several sent out by the club inviting "club dues" to help the Republican cause.

Roberts received his appointment as corporation counsel from President Roosevelt.

"You undertake to rebuke us for soliciting civil employes of the District government," Lesh continued. "I am sure you do not suggest that their employment makes it improper for them to contribute to the Republican campaign fund, nor does the fact that many of them are Democrats.

"You might be suprised to learn how many Democrats, because of their loyalty to those principles of constitutional government to which both parties have subscribed, are supporting this year the Republican national ticket. Such of them as reside in our disenfranchised District can best help by joining our Landon and Knox Campaign Club.

"I am convinced that what you gave the press as an intended rebuke to us was prompted by your failure to distinguish between soliciitng letters from Government officials to employes of the Government, which have been justly and publicly condemned, and a letter from a private citizen like myself."

Roberts opened his letter to Lesh with "My dear Paul." Lesh in reply began with "Dear Bill."

Co-ed Murder Near Solution, Sheriff States

Arrest Within Two Days Expected; Inquiry Veers Away From Wollner.

By the United Press.

Asheville, N. C., July 22.—Sheriff Laurance Brown tonight said he expected to arrest the murderer of 19-year-old Helen Clevenger "within two days."

The statement came as he held four persons in jail for further questioning and after he had spent the day obtaining written statements from 58 employes of the Battery Park Hotel, where the young New York University student was slain early Thursday.

"I'm finding some very interesting facts in this investigation," he said, "and feel that we are coming closer to a solution of the crime. I expect to make another arrest within a couple of days."

"Will this arrest be the criminal?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

The sheriff refused to divulge today's developments, but his statement indicated none of those now in custody was suspected of any actual connection with the crime.

"Solution Lies in Hotel."

"I still think the solution of the mystery lies right in the hotel," he added.

Edward Fleming, colored bellhop on duty at the hotel the night Miss Clevenger was assaulted, shot and beaten to death, was released today.

Others still in custody are Mark Wollner, 35-year-old German-born concert violinist; Mildred Ward, 19-year-old daughter of his landlady; Daniel Gaddy, hotel night watchman, and L. D. Roddy, colored elevator operator.

The investigation apparently has turned definitely away from Wollner despite the fact that some of his clothes were sent to the State chemist at Raleigh for analysis.

Wollner was taken into custody Saturday night after a haberdasher's clerk told officers he had overheard the musician say he had "a date" with a girl at the hotel last Wednesday night.

The violinist claimed he was at home in bed at the time Miss Clevenger was slain—established as about 1 a. m. Thursday. Miss Ward supported this alibi, telling officers Wollner retired early and remained in his room all that night.

Six Mistaken, He Says.

Brown obtained statements from eight persons who said they saw Wollner on the street at various times last Wednesday night between 9:30 a. m. and 6 a. m. Late today, however, Asheville Chief of Police W. J. Everett said he had questioned them and was convinced six were mistaken.

Earlier, Detective Chief Fred Jones said he was convinced Wollner was "entirely" innocent of any connection with the crime and that it was "an inside job."

Brown said he did not suspect Gaddy of having committed the crime, but that he believed he held "the key to the whole situation." Gaddy insists he made his rounds as usual last Wednesday night, but the time clock recording tape fails to show that the clock in the corridor outside Miss Clevenger's room was punched at the scheduled time of 1 a. m last Thursday.

Ed Brady, the hotel's chief engineer, was among those questioned today. Brady had charge of the 11 pass keys issued to chambermaids and other employes. An apparent duplicate of one of these keys was found in the door to the girl's room when she was found dead. Brown said he was "positive" the key was used by the murderer.

Clothes Analyzed.

Raleigh, N. C., July 22 (U.P.).—A package containing what were assumed to be the clothes worn by Mark Wollner, German-born violinist, when he was arrested in Asheville for questioning in connection with the slaying of Helen Clevenger, arrived by mail tonight at the office of the Laboratory of Hygiene of the North Carolina State Board of Health.

Hygiene laboratory officials turned the package over to W. M. Allen, State chemist.

The package contained a gray checkered sport coat, gray slacks with brownish stains near the belt loops, a white dress shirt with two collar buttons and a cuff-link, a red and white striped tie, a soft collar, a leather sport belt and a pair of blue shorts. Stamped in the collar in ink was the name "Wollner."

L. B. Rhodes, Allen's assistant, pointed out that little could be accomplished by an analysis for blood stains, either on Wollner's clothes or on the victim's pajamas.

"We do not have facilities to determine if stains were made by human blood," he said. "We can tell if they were made by blood, but we cannot identify it as human."

Neither Rhodes nor Aller would comment on the stains on the trousers. The stains were small spots of reddish-brown.

Miss Perkins Sails For European Parley

Boston, July 22 (A.P.).—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins sailed tonight for Europe aboard the Statendam of the Holland-America Line.

She said she boarded the ship at New York "at the last moment." Her name was not on the passenger list. She said she would remain in Europe for three weeks. The Statendam, en route from New York, stopped here to take on New England passengers.

Miss Perkins said she would address the International League of Business and Professional Women at Paris on July 30, inspect European offices of the Department of Labor, participate in a series of conferences with international labor officials on "general matters of cooperation," and help make plans for the world textile conference to be held early next month.

They found charred fragments of $51,000 worth of burned counterfeit bonds, pieced enough parts together to make one complete bond and photographed it.

Pennsylvania Senate Booed In Relief Crisis

Hunger Marchers Continue Capitol Siege as Aid Legislation Fails.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 22.—Several hundred "hunger marchers" booed and jeered from the galleries today as Pennsylvania's Senate failed to work out a tax program to provide $45,000,000 for relief of the unemployed.

They heckled and shouted demands for "$100,000,000, or 64 cents per day per person," then sat back and munched sandwiches, and announced they intended to sleep in the galleries unless the Senate "quit playing politics."

Pennsylvania's relief funds were exhausted last midnight. Republicans and Democrats are deadlocked over revenue bills and how to get more money into the relief treasury for the remainder of July.

It was collapse of relief that brought the "marchers" to the Statehouse for the second time in two weeks. Unmolested, they "took over" the capitol rotunda last night, organized their own "legislature," and slept on the marble stairs, floors and on cots carried to the doors of the House and Senate.

Wash Hung on Statue.

Women bathed youngsters with water carried to the rotunda from basement washrooms and one woman did the family wash and hung the garments on a statue.

Uniformed troopers patrolled the bolted Senate and House doors, but left the galleries open to the marchers.

John Muldowney, a bronzed youth in shirt sleeves, from the coal fields, addressed the Senate today, reiterating that the unemployed must have $100,000,000 and "will not compromise with the reactionaries."

Then the Senate recessed. There was another roar of disapproval. Leaders ordered their followers to remain in the galleries. Sandwiches and coffee were brought to them.

Hold Mock Session.

They sang. They cheered, college-fashion. They shouted to Senators. Then another "mock session" of the Legislature was held in which they "voted" appropriation of $100,000,000 and cheered their own action.

Small groups of "marchers" slept today in the State farm show building, tired after the night spent in noisy demonstration in the Statehouse.

Leaders said other delegates would arrive tonight and tomorrow and that cots would be spread over the Capitol lawns.

The Legislature made little progress toward solution of the relief problem. The Senate Finance Committee held another long session, discussing revenue bills.

Earle Sees Leaders.

At the same time, New Deal Gov. George H. Earle summoned Democratic leaders and Floor Leader Herbert Cohen said no new revenue measures would be proposed by the House.

He blamed the Republicans in the Senate for the tie-up, saying the Senate has enough revenue bills in its possession to complete the tax program agreed upon while "hunger marchers" stormed the Capitol more than a week ago.

Gov. Earle refused to recede from his stand against "borrowing" further money from special funds for relief until the Senate has given him his tax program.

Wild Tribes of Strange Indians Blamed by Eskimos for Crimes

Natives of Alaska, Dwelling in Unknown Valley Far in Interior, Believed Responsible for Disappearances and Recent Robbery.

By the Associated Press.

Barrow, Alaska, July 22.—Eskimos of the Arctic coast, imaginations fired by a recent robbery of the tundra, revived strange tales today of a tribe or Indians dwelling in an unknown valley in the far interior.

Mixed with stories of these legendary people were accounts of massacres beneath the Northern Lights, of men vanishing in the desolate wastes, of robbery and of revenge.

Some of the Eskimos blamed members of the mysterious tribe for the recent robbery of Charlie Edwardson, 16, half white, who was collecting rare bird eggs with Rex Lloyd, 23, quarter white, "12 days from Barrow."

Others among the coast dwellers spoke of an old feud between the Eskimos and Indians from south of the Baird Mountains.

Both whites and Eskimos expressed apprehension for the safety of some Point Barrow Eskimo families known to be camped near the mountains 300 miles south of Barrow.

Dr. Henry W. Greist, surgeon at the Presbyterian Mission, recalled that six years ago two Eskimos left Wainwright with dog teams for a short trip to the interior and never were seen again. He said eight Eskimos trailed the two to their camp and found tracks convincing them the missing men were captured by Indians.

The Eskimo-Indian feud dates back more than 100 years, Dr. Greist said.

"Eighty years ago," he added, "a war party from the interior pounced on the Eskimos at Shishmareff on Bering Strait.

"The Eskimos were dancing in the Kosge House with a big skylight open for ventilation. The Indians killed all but two men who escaped and then took all the women and babies left and started up a river. The two Eskimos overtook the war party in a few days and found the camp unguarded and the Indians asleep. The Eskimos armed themselves with stone clubs and bashed in the heads of the sleeping Indians, one by one. They took the women and children back to Shishmareff."

Kensington C. of C. To Ask Road Fund

Meeting in the elementary school, the Kensington Chamber of Commerce last night voted to send a special delegation to Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, to appeal for a larger allocation of State road funds to Montgomery County.

Speakers for the Chamber charged that out of the $11,000,000 Maryland allotment, the county this year has received only $55,000 as its share.

Members of the committee to confront the Governor were not named last night, but Washington I. Cleveland, president of the organization, said they soon would be named.

Thirteen new members were admitted at the meeting, and announcement was made that the new Kensington Junior High School would be ready for occupancy in September, 1937.

Night Nude in Woods Fails to Harm Baby

Columbia, S. C., July 22 (A.P.).—A rainy night spent nude in the woods apparently failed to harm Franklin Delano Byrd, 28-month-old namesake of the President.

Searchers who conducted an all-night hunt found the infant sleeping on the hard gravel bed of a creek 2 miles from his farm home.

His mother, Mrs. Dewey Byrd, said he shed his clothing to romp in the rain about 6 p. m. yesterday. He disappeared while she went to bring home the cow.

County and city police and approximately 40 CCC campers from Pontiac beat the bushes when the child was reported lost.

Clevelanders Find 5th Headless Body

Cleveland, July 22 (A.P.).—The nude and headless body of a man was found in an isolated gully today. It was the fifth headless body found in the West Side district within the last year.

Detective Sergt. James Hogan said he was convinced a maniacal killer was responsible for all the deaths. Coroner A. J. Pearse, however, said he was not certain the man had been murdered.

Miss Marie Barkley, 17, found the body and summoned police, who later discovered the head and clothing, 40 feet away. The victim, about 40, had been dead about three or four months, and the body had been mutilated.

On June 5 the headless body of a young man was found, and the next day a head was found a mile away. Last September 23 the bodies of two men, decapitated and mutilated, were found in the same neighborhood. One was identified as that of Edward Andrassey, who had been reported missing. Before that the headless body of a woman was discovered.

Governor Asks Typewriter Co. Strike Parley

Chief Executives of Three States May Meet With Rand.

By the United Press.

Hartford, Conn., July 22.—Gov. Wilbur L. Cross tonight appealed to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, Gov. Martin L. Davy of Ohio, James H. Rand, jr., president of Remington-Rand, and representatives of unions to meet with him in New York next week to consider settlement of labor difficulties at Remington-Rand plants.

Following renewal of violence at the Middletown branch plant of the far-flung typewriter manufacturing firm, Gov. Cross sent telegrams to Rand and the two Governors.

Strikes have plagued the tri-State Remington-Rand plants for the last two months. President Rand reportedly has refused to have any dealings with the strikers and has attempted to keep his plants operating despite the labor difficulties.

Most violence has occurred at the Norwood, Ohio, and Middletown branch plants. Not more than two weeks ago Gov. Cross cut his vacation short to be on hand at the State Capitol here should emergency measures be needed to handle the situation in Middletown, where several persons were seriously injured in rioting.

Gov. Cross' action followed an assault on a plainclothes State policeman doing guard duty at the Middletown branch. Three men were arrested on charges of breach of the peace.

At the same time, the State police guard was tripled.

Miami University, Town Will Honor McGuffey

Oxford, Ohio, July 22 (A.P.).—Miami University and Oxford will join Friday and Saturday in tribute to one of their most illustrious sons, William Holmes McGuffey, on the centennial of the publication of the "McGuffey Readers by Grades."

Regardless of summer's heat, coonskin and homespun will have its part in a pageant, along with crinoline of the period, as events in the life of the red-haired schoolmaster are re-enacted.

It was here that McGuffey, while a member of Miami University's faculty, wrote his readers, first published in 1836.

Ex-Police Chief Denies Helping Kidnap Hamm

Tom Brown Takes Stand in St. Paul to Attack Witness' Charge.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, July 22.—A witness-stand denial that he aided the kidnapers he was assigned to hunt was Tom Brown's answer today to charges which led to his suspension from the police department after 22 years as a member.

Brown, who was St. Paul police chief from 1930 to 1932, was a defense witness in the Federal court trial of John (Jack) Peifer, St. Paul night club operator. Peifer is charged with participation in the $100,000 abduction of William Hamm, jr.

Later the defendant himself took the witness stand to deny the Government's charges that he received $10,000 for acting as "fingerman," for the actual kidnaping.

Brown's testimony broke a silence he had maintained since last Friday, when Byron Bolton, confessed kidnaper testifying for the Government, declared the officer received $25,000 for informing the kidnap gang of police movements after the brewer was seized June 15, 1933.

The former police chief not only denied receiving Hamm ransom money, but also that he ever had reported to Tom Dahill, then chief of police, that the people living at 204 Vernon avenue had "no connection" with the kidnaping. Dahill had so testified earlier.

The Government contends the Vernon avenue address, in an exclusive residential section, housed the kidnapers before and after the abduction.

Brown asserted he had never visited the house and had never heard the address mentioned until some time after the kidnaping.

Brown's suspension followed Bolton's testimony last week.

Secretary Dern Goes to Hospital

Secretary of War Dern has been in Walter Reed Hospital since Monday for a rest and a physical checkup, the War Department announced yesterday.

Last April Dern had influenza, contracted while he was on an inspection trip down the intracoastal waterway to Charleston, S. C., the Secretary's office reported. At the time he spent several weeks in the hospital.

He became fatigued after an inspection of engineer projects on the Delaware River last week, officials said, and was advised to enter the hospital for further treatment.

Physicians at the hospital last night described the Secretary's condition as "much improved."

Youth's Neck Twisted, He Regains Memory

Columbus, Ohio, July 22 (A.P.).—When a doctor twisted his neck and relieved pressure on his brain, a 20-year-old amnesia victim regained his memory tonight and said he was John Misera, of Chicago.

After the treatment Dr. Charles H. Damsel, who had offered to help police identify the boy, tested him with words until the boy remembered his name.

Voters Mandate In '32 Ignored, Lemke Asserts

Candidate Assails Farm Plan of Administration; Predicts Victory.

If members of Congress had asserted the rights the Constitution gives them "we would not be in the mess we are in today," William Lemke, candidate for President of the proposed Union Party, told members of the National Press Club yesterday.

"The mandate of the people in 1932 was spoiled by a brainless trust," he continued.

Discussing farm legislation, Lemke said the Administration farm bill was drafted by "coupon clippers" in New York and had caused thousands of farmers to lose their homes.

The candidate advocated establishment of a bank of the United States to control credit, and demanded that the credit of the country be taken out of the hands of "international bankers" and given to the people.

He advocated a currency based upon the price of commodities, less currency to be issued as prices go up and more as they go down, thus maintaining a balance. Lemke told his audience that with the $16,000,000,000 he said already spent for relief all the farm land in the country could have been bought at $44 an acre and distributed to persons on relief.

Says Congress Had Mandate.

"Congress had a mandate to make the people self-supporting," he said, "and we would have done it if we had been left alone."

Lemke said there is no difference between the old parties. He predicted his own election and announced he intended to send both President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon into "happy and peaceful retirement."

Discussing the Constitution, Lemke said he was not nearly so afraid of usurpation of power by the courts as usurpation by the Chief Executive.

"Some officials get enlargement of the head and think they are your bosses just because you made a mistake on election day," he said.

Criticizes Wallace.

He severely criticized Secretary Wallace and said the Secretary should be prosecuted for using the people's money for the destruction of property.

Lemke said he had been asked from which candidate he expected to take the most votes.

"I don't give a continental whom I take the most votes from," he said.

He challenged President Roosevelt and the Republican candidate—he said he did not know whether the latter was Landon or John Hamilton, Republican chairman—to a debate on the money question.

At the close of the talk he was asked whether he intended in his speech at the recent Townsend convention at Cleveland to indorse the Townsend plan. He replied that he would sign a "fair" old-age pension bill but that Congress must work out the details.

Asked whether he agreed with the statement of his sponsor, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, that President Roosevelt is a "double-crosser and liar," he replied that he was not engaging in personalities.

A. F. L. Charter Given To Newspaper Guild

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced last night a charter had been issued to the American Newspaper Guild as an international union.

All local guilds, Green said, are now entitled to seats in city central bodies and State federations of labor.

Green also announced Don Stevens, national treasurer of the guild, had been appointed a full-time organizer of the federation, assigned to the guild.

Spy Case

to delve into the record on Farnsworth, and to be prepared to state the Government's case before the jury this morning.

The record, which contains all the material on Farnsworth compiled by the Navy Department of Intelligence and the Department of Justice, is voluminous, and Beach, as he tackled the job of going through it, said he expected to stay up all night reading it. He assured Garnett, however, he would be prepared to state the case to the grand jury this morning.

Farnsworth, who has been lodged since his arrest at the District Jail, will not be present at today's hearing. Neither will his case be heard. This is a hearing solely to give the Government an opportunity to present evidence on which an indictment could be based.

District Attorney Garnett indicated yesterday the grand jury's investigation may be completed this afternoon. Its decision, however, may not be made for a period of two or three days.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, declined to comment last night on the strength of the Justice Department's case against Farnsworth.

Farnsworth was arrested on two counts. One was that he obtained confidential photographs from the Navy, and handed them over to the Japanese government. The other charges him with delivering to Japanese officials a copy of a confidential naval publication, "The Service of Information and Security."

Roosevelt Asks Drought Study

Kansas City a four-point program to combat drought ravages in the future. His points were:

(1) Judicious commodity loans, especially in years of excessive supplies, (2) the ever-normal granary, (3) crop insurance, and (4) Government purchase of land which definitely should never have been plowed.

In his letter to members of the new Great Plains committee, President Roosevelt said he desired a study "looking toward the most efficient utilization of the natural resources of the Great Plains area, and especially toward practicable measures for remedying the conditions which have wrought widespread losses and distress to so many inhabitants of the Missouri, Platte and Arkansas valleys, the Panhandles of Oklahoma and Texas and contiguous areas."

The President hinted at fundamental changes in the methods of farming the drought area when he wrote that "perhaps in this area of relative little rain, practices brought from the more humid part of the country are not most suitable under the prevailing natural conditions."

He said further: "At any rate circumstances make it obvious that relief activities are not sufficient and that a competent study and recommendations are desirable."

Secretary Wallace emphasized crop insurance in his address, declaring it would do away with much of the need for relief and emergency loans in times of stress. He revealed a study of one form of crop insurance in which the "premiums," which could be paid in grain, would be collected only in years of excess production. Such a payment would take off the market a portion of the excess production and restrict the price decline that otherwise could be expected, he said.

The "premium" grain would be held until a year of crop failure, when it would be paid out to the farmers who needed it most. This plan, on a national scale, would really become the ever-normal granary plan which he long has advocated. It would provide social security for the farmer, he declared, and would also tend to lessen the temptation for overplanting.

Of the present drought he declared that supplies of food are not down to scarcity levels and "there seems to be no reason to think they will be." He added that "any propagandist or profiteer who tries to arouse such a scare is attempting to sell the hideous fear of scarcity for financial or personal profit."

Meanwhile there were other drought developments.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said consumers probably would have to pay somewhat higher prices for butter because of the damage to pastures and other officials saw increased prices in the next six months for grains, potatoes, fruits and vegetables.

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized a 15 per cent cut in freight rates on livestock shipped from the drought areas to feeding grounds in other States, and an 85 per cent cut from regular rates for reshipment back.

The Agriculture Department added three Wyoming counties to the official drought area, now including 493 counties.

A portion of the Middle West faed temperatures of 100 degrees or more in a rsumption of the heat wave. The heat wave death total stood just under 4,600, the Associated Press reported, along with more deaths in Nebraska and southern California.

Corn prices shot up again on the Chicago Board of Trade. Final figures were 3⅛ cents higher than the previous close.

The Mississippi River dropped to a new low water level for the date, almost as low as the all-time record in the latter part of 1934.

Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator reported that 28,000 destitute farmers now are on the WPA rolls in the drought area.

The Agriculture Department, meanwhile, issued figures showing that farmers' income in the first six months of 1936 aggregated $3,291,000,000, an increase of $335,000,000 over the same period of last year. The total for the last six months included $171,000,000 in benefit payments, compared with $286,000,000 in the corresponding portion of 1935.

the family on public matters but turned with relish to a discussion of the social formalities of the occasion and the gown she would wear tomorrow night. Although she is but 37 years old—and looks several years younger—Mrs. Landon handled her press conference calmly and without apparently being perturbed in the slightest.

Incidentally, Gov. Landon indicated to the Washington correspondents that he was fully alive to current issues and that he is as good a master at press conferences as is President Roosevelt. Mrs. Mae Craig, a Washington correspondent for Maine newspapers, supplied the incident. Mrs. Craig's favorite question at White House press conferences has to do with the now-abandoned Passamaquoddy Dam. She never tires of questioning President Roosevelt on that subject.

Their Special Joke.

Consequently, when she demanded to know of Gov. Landon what his attitude was toward "'Quoddy," the Washington newspaper men and women laughed. It might have been expected that the outburst would have perplexed Gov. Landon, for this was a special joke of the Washington correspondents.

But it did not. He immediately came back with a question as to whether anyone representing Florida was present. Florida had no representative. Well, said the Governor, he did not believe he should discuss "Quoddy" without discussing the Florida ship canal, and since no one was present for Florida he would defer the discussion for a future occasion.

The District of Columbia representatives already are on the scene. Republican National Committeeman Edward F. Colladay, member of the notification committee, with Republican State Chairman James Wilkes, of the District of Columbia, were early arrivals, Galen L. Tait, former Maryland State chairman, accompanying them. Mrs. Doily Gann, sister of the late Charles Curtis, and her husband, Edward E. Gann, also were here from the District. A large group of Marylanders, headed by Gov. Harry Nice, was en route here tonight.

To Meet Party Leaders.

Landon's only set appointment tomorrow was a luncheon with members of the Republican National Committee and the notification committee. Here he will mix with party leaders from throughout the country.

Headliners on the notification program with Landon—Representative Bertrand Snell, who delivers the notification address, and Hamilton—were due to arrive tomorrow morning.

masterships upon a strictly civil service basis."

Reminding the President that in the last days of the recent session Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), Iowa, sought to obtain enactment of such a measure by seeking suspension of the rules, thus needing a two-thirds majority, he said:

"A majority of the Republican members voted against the bill, while the Democratic members by a vote of more than three to one, supported it, but because a two-thirds vote was necessary, the bill failed by seven votes to secure the necessary two-thirds.

"I recall that at the time of the introduction of the measure you expressed the belief that this reform should be accomplished by Executive order, if legislation should fail. The fact that the House of Representatives, in which the Democrats hold such a preponderant majority, voted 205 to 112 in favor of suspending the rules and passing the Ramspeck bill fully justifies the action which you now have taken.

Calls It Permanent Move.

"I feel confident that this advance in the application of the merit system to the appointment of postmasterships will never be undone. Great as have been the achievements of your Administration, this will rank among the greatest."

In Atlanta, Ga., according to the United Press, Representative Ramspeck hailed the order as a great stride forward for welfare of the civil service, adding:

"It shows the President has good faith in regard to civil service. It will greatly strengthen the position of the Democratic Party on the question of patronage in the coming campaign."

For many years, postmastership appointments have been made on the recommendation of the House member from the district of the occurring vacancy. Debate, ranging from mild criticism to furious and bitter charges has featured House and Senate sessions for years over the matter, but Representatives, in the main, were known to welcome the change, since they often have found that they get one vote and lose a score by an appointment, as disappointed jobseekers are active enemies.

Austria Grants 10,000 Liberty Under Treaty

Decree for Political Cases Follows Nazi Pact; Effective Today.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, July 22.—About 10,000 political offenders, including many convicted in the July, 1934, Nazi Putsch in which former Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was slain, and the February, 1934, "Socialist revolution," were granted an amnesty tonight.

The decree was part of Austria's obligations under the recent accord with the Hitler government of Germany.

A communique issued by President Wilhelm Miklas gave no figures, but listed the broad principles governing the amnesty decree promising that certain cases remain to be studied.

The amnesty will go into effect tomorrow, 48 hours before the second anniversary of Dollfuss' assassination, which Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg once said never would be forgotten or forgiven.

960 in Jail.

The amnesty order will mean merely freedom from police surveillance for many already at liberty, but 960 are subject to release from jail, said a chancellery official, who declared 10,000 are involved.

A large proportion of those receiving the amnesty are Nazis, but the communique said no distinction would be made in political leanings.

The only name mentioned was that of former Mayor Karl Seitz, of Vienna, a Socialist, who was freed previously on the condition he would abstain from politics. Semiofficial sources hinted that former Police Director Otto Steinhaeusl, of Vienna, sentenced to seven years' imprisonment last December for alleged complicity in the Nazi putsch, is slated for amnesty.

It is believed that Anton Rintelin, who was proclaimed chancellor when the Nazis obtained momentary control of the radio, would not be affected by the amnesty at present. Rintelin, who is seriously ill, was reported by the government to have attempted suicide when the putsch failed.

Of 46 persons serving life prison terms, 13 will be released outright and the remainder paroled.

Another result of the Austro-German accord was permission given four German papers to enter Austria.

Lose Big Hips Fat Stomachs Double Chins

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

There is no mystery about this method. Doctors have been prescribing it for years. It is based on a scientific discovery of the medical profession that excess fat in many cases is caused by a little gland that does not work well.

Every drop of our blood goes through this tiny gland sixteen times a day. It produces about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours. The action of this fluid on the blood is much the same as the action a good draft has on the burning of coal in a furnace. It turns on the "draft" that increases the speed with which food and fatty tissues "burn up".

If this gland doesn't pour out about one and one-half drops of its vital fluid a day, many people take on fat.

Doctors find a simple easy way to remedy this condition is to feed this gland the substance it lacks. Then, many people get rid of the excess flesh that swells out their figures in ugly bumps and lumps.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method so generally used by modern doctors. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is given in every package so you know what you're taking.

For 28 years millions of fat people have found Marmola Prescription Tablets effective for the reduction of ugly fat. Don't take chances with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Get a box of Marmola from your druggist today.

Fairfax County Moves to Curb Drunk Driving

Adopts Ordinance; Salary of Judge Increased; Policeman Named.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

Enactment of a driving while drunk ordinance, increasing the salary of the circuit court judge and the appointment of a special county policeman were among the important business transacted yesterday at a special meeting of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors.

Action on amendments to the county electrical department ordinances was postponed and Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown and Electrical Inspector F. P. Sagendorf were instructed to redraft the entire county electric code to meet modern conditions. The old county code was adopted about 12 years ago and is inadequate in many modern circumstances.

The new ordinance on driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, which becomes effective on August 7, parallels the State law but makes the violation a local offense. Fines collected under the ordinance, ranging from $100 to $1,000, will now go to the county treasury instead of the State. Based on collections under the State law for the last several years it is expected by county officials that the new ordinance will increase the county revenue on an average of $500 a month.

Judge's Salary Increased.

George B. Robey, Wilson M. Farr and Paul E. Brown appeared representing the county bar association, requesting the salary of the judge of the circuit court be supplemented by Fairfax County $50 0a year. The present salary of $4,500 is paid equally by Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William counties and Alexandria City, which comprise the judicial circuit. Arlington County recently supplemented this amount by $1,000. The committee cited the fact that most county officials, including the clerks of the courts in the circuit, are paid more annually than the judge receives from the entire circuit and that the salary is inadequate for such a position, due to the increased amount of work in recent years. The board voted the increase.

Deputy Sheriff George P. McCann was appointed a special county policeman, subject to the approval of the judge of the circuit court. His salary was set at $125 a month. He will be stationed at Fairfax, primarily to assist the sheriff for night police work on the highways.

The action was taken following a request of the citizens of Falls Church District for special patrol to prevent night parking along the county roads. C. E. Stoneburner, representing the Baileys Crossroads-Seminary citizens complained of drinking parties along the highways disturbing the residents throughout the night. He cited the fact that Fairfax County has 420 square miles with only six policemen to cover the entire county. These include the three special county police, the sheriff and two deputies.

Sheriff E. P. Kirby pointed to the fact that during the past year several organizations had requested the employment of additional police especially for night work. He asked that the force be enlarged immediately to meet the demands of the citizens. He proposed that two additional men be employed for night duty, using the present police cars for the two shifts.

Will Draft Ordinance.

Commonwealth's Attorney Brown was instructed to draft the proposed county ordinance making it unlawful to dump trash, tin cans or other refuse on private land without obtaining the landowner's consent. Public highways and public property are already protected by State law.

Two requests were received from the newly organized Great Falls-Old Dominion Road Association. The association, composed of citizens of the northern section of the county, is seeking to have the abandoned right of way of the Great Falls branch of the Washington, Old Dominion Railway from Franklin Park to the Georgetown Pike improved for highway purposes. This property was recently acquired by the county in payment of delinquent taxes.

The association asked permission to remove the underbrush and ties from the right of way and to floor the smaller bridges so that the residents of that section can use the right of way as a road immediately. It was pointed out that the road bed has a rock and cinder ballast and is the only means of ingress of many persons during bad weather. When the railway was discontinued many residents were left stranded and forced to abandon their homes, during the fall, winter and spring months.

The other request petitioned the board to ask the State highway commission to have the right of way taken into the State system and improved immediately from the Arlington County line to Elkins on the Georgetown Pike near Great Falls. It was pointed out that this work would entail very little expense as the roa d bed was graded and ballasted and the bridges were intact. The bridges would require flooring. Action on both requests was postpond until the regular meeting of the board next month.

The Switch That Starts the Machinery That Runs the Farm

Upper—Secretary of Interior Ickes throws the switch at Rosedale Farm, the most electrified rural unit in the United States. At his right are Virginia's Governor, George C. Peery, and Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator. Lower—"That's milk from the electric cow," said Peggy Hughes, 6, granddaughter of the owner of the farm, as she gave the secretary a glassful.

Electric Farm

electricity "we are on the eve of a new era for the farmer—one in which his home will be not unlike that of his neighbor in the city as regards conveniences."

Most of the sightseers who later toured the place disagreed with that statement. They found Farmer Hughes' place decidedly unlike most city homes; it's about 50 per cent more modern.

Air-conditioning cools some of the rooms. Fans of the latest design cool others. In the kitchen food is mixed, orange juice is squeezed, meals are cooked, meats, fruits and vegetables are kept cool, dishes are washed and dried, clothes are laundered and ironed, bread is toasted, water is heated, coffee is made—all by electricity.

The 200-year-old farmhouse now stands a strange mixture of the very old and the very new. Near the cool, compact electric range is an open fireplace where all food was cooked when Gen. Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson dined in the ancient structure. The old-fashioned dinner bell has been silenced and an electric siren calls the farm workers to their meals.

Most useful and satisfying of all the new appliances is the electric refrigerator, in the opinion of Mrs. Hughes. Her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Walter Darr Hughes, who lives at Rosedale Dairy Rarm, cast her first vote for the electric dishwasher.

While the Hughes family basks in the soft glow of indirect lighting, listens to the radio and tells time by three electric clocks, the animals are trying to adjust themselves to new-fangled conveniences.

An electric brooder brings up baby chickens by electricity, hens are encouraged to lay bigger and better eggs by ultra-violet rays thrown upon them, and the cows may listen to soothing music over the radio as they are being milked by electric milking machines.

Electric screens discourage flies who would enter the milk house, and an electrified fence enables Farmer Hughes to keep his cows and horses in a certain pasture without much trouble.

Other chores around the farm that have been electrified are hay hoisting, feed grinding, corn shelling, meat grinding, milk cooling and cream separating.

"Sure is a lot easier on us," said Hughes and his two sons—Walter Darr Hughes and William Randolph Hughes—who help him run the 212-acre place.

The women folk are having an easier time, too, they admitted. In addition to the appliances which lighten housework, Mrs. Hughes and her daughter-in-law have the use of electric hair dryer and curling iron, electric vibrator and heating pad.

All the equipment has been installed by manufacturers and is on loan to the Hughes family for a year. At the end of that time Rosedale Dairy Farm may have some of the gadgets ripped out, but the neighbors are betting that every piece will stay. Hughes will be given an opportunity to buy the appliances at low cost.

At first the farm was supposed to be open to the public with no restrictions, but the members of the family soon decided they would have to have some time to themselves. Thus the visiting hours from now on until the end of the specified year are from 10 a. m. to 12 noon and from 2 to 5 p. m., weekdays, and from 2 to 5 p. m., Sundays.

Big Vice Ring Revealed Here

with her parents in a Southern city when she met Mary Hipple. Later, she said, the woman came to her and told her of "easy money" and "wonderful opportunities" for a girl in Washington.

She was put on a train and her fare was paid, she told Blick. When she arrived in Washington she was quartered in the Belmont street house, which was owned by the Hipple woman and managed by Mrs. Jackson. After several weeks, she said, she was installed in an apartment, subject to call from the Jackson woman.

Called to Leading Hotels.

At this time and subsequently she was summoned to the leading hotels of the city, she said.

Employes of the hotels had been given the telephone number of the Belmont street address, she told Blick.

Their method of operation, she said, was to satisfy guests who were anxious for "dates." She did not, however, specify the hotels or name the types of employes. Usually, she pointed out, the number had been memorized.

As son as the Jackson woman got a call, she picked out one of Mary Hipple's girls, most of whom had their apartments.

The "take" of the "management"—which consisted of Mary Hipple and Mrs. Jackson—was half of the proceds and $5 a week service charge, the girl said. Earnings ran high most of the time, she added, often giving her more than $100 a week for herself.

At the time Mrs. Hipple and Mrs. Jackson were arrested, there were 15 girls in the ring, Blick learned. The number varied, and, according to what he could learn from the girl, Blick said it appeared Mary Hipple operated through the South in getting recruits.

Lieut. George Little, chief of the vice squad, and Department of Justice agents conferred on the case late yesterday. They expect to make several more arrests in Georgia, Little said last night.

Uncovering of the vice ring here recalled the enormous white slave traffic dominated until little more than a month ago, by "Lucky" Luciano, Manhattan gangster, now serving a long term in Sing Sing.

"The vice squad and the entire police department," said Little last night, "will spare no effort to rid Washington of white slavery. If there are other rings we will get them."

Jurors Charge Sailors Passed Fake Bills Here

Trade With Counterfeiters in N. Y. Is Charged; 35 Are Indicted.

Charged with passing approximately $700 in spurious money in the District and nearby towns, two sailors stationed here, Stewart B. Hitchner and William K. Greene, were indicted by the District grand jury yesterday. The indictment gives seven instances in which allegedly fradulent bills, in denominations of $10 and $20, were passed.

The indictment, one of 35 returned to Justice Oscar R. Luhring in District Court yesterday, alleged that the New York syndicate from which the bills were purchased at a price of $30 for $100, issued elaborate instructions for "ageing" the bills so they would not appear to be brand new.

Arrest of the pair followed an attempt to pass one of the bills in Mount Rainier, Md., last month. Hitchner was arrested then, and Greene was picked up later. Both allegedly pleaded guilty when they were arrainged before United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage several weeks ago.

Indicted in Movie Stabing.

In another indictment, the grand jury charged John T. Trazzare, 17, with assault with a dangerous weapon. According to police, the boy became so excited at a scene in an F street movie that he whipped out a knife and stabbed Miss Virginia A. Blunt, 1205 First street southwest, a stranger to him, in the neck.

Miss Blunt, sitting in the balcony of the theater, narrowly escaped serious injury, physicians said, the knife almost reaching her jugular vein. The picture that aroused the youth depicted a man fighting an alligator.

Others indicted were: Joseph Paul Spencer, sr., nonsupport; Joseph Francis Robertson, Francis Bozzi, Jack M. Harper, Wilson Nolan, Wilbur Williams and Edward Marsellars, joy-riding; William Banks, grand larceny; Ellis Hamilton, Theodore Harrison, William T. Hill, Bernard Dillon, Mattie Humphlett and Ray Humphlett, housebreaking and larceny; Joseph C. Stewart, Vernard A. Martin, Mellon Springs, Austin Stewart, Theodore Brown and James Edwards, robbery.

Robbery Attempts Charged.

Martin D. McInturff, assault with intent to commit robbery; Benjamin Cheek, James Marrow, Leon Clark, William Jones, Alphonso Brown and Ivory Gaither, assault with a dangerous weapon; John Wesley Tucker, rape; Clarence Robinson and Paul Parker, assault with intent to commit rape; Clifford Williams, James Earl King, Ralph O. Fowler, George W. Douglas, Martha A. Burnett, Claude Vincent Reeves, Milton Donald Reeves, Catherine C. Carpenter and Helen I. Smith, gaming charges. John Komlos, forgery and uttering.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were: Harvey Gantt, abduction; Moses F. Calloway and William H. Fling, joyriding; Frank R. Wesley, false pretenses; Prosser I. Jeffreys, grand larceny; Robert L. Brown, assault with intent to commit robbery; Jack S. Crosslin, forgery and uttering, and George B. Havener, housebreaking and larceny.

Hungarian Chancery Is Guarded

A policeman is on guard in the rear of the chancery of the Hungarian Legation at 1424 Sixteenth street after a bombing plot against the minister and his staff was overheard and reported to police.

Hungarian Legation Guarded

Communist group to seek an audience with Minister Pelenyi, it was disclosed.

The group, accompanied by detectives, went to the chancery to protest the execution of their comrade in Budapest, according to an authoritative informant. Minister Pelenyi refused to see the delegation. The disgruntled protesters departed, threatening to return.

Overheard Plot in Alley.

A few days later, at 5 a. m., a woman resident on the first floor of the apartment house awoke to hear voices in the alley beneath her window, it was learned. She listened while a plot to bomb the building was hatched by "two foreigners."

The plotters, she reported, spoke in broken English and stood directly under a fire escape leading to the chancery offices four floors above. In the half light of a gray dawn, the woman was unable to see the men distinctly enough to furnish accurate descriptions, it was reported.

Conversation of the reputed plotters—which lasted for several minutes—was detailed to police by the woman. Her report, however, was described as "strictly confidential" and its contents were not divulged.

Ace Sleuths Assigned.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, detective chief, has assigned ace investigators to the case. The State department, it was reported, has not been notified of the plot. Thompson refused to discuss the affair, other than to admit he had ordered guards stationed at the chancery and legation day and night.

Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown also refused to comment on the reported plot, indicating he was bound by "diplomatic confidences." He said, however, that the police guard would be continued until the investigation was completed.

In answer to questions yesterday, Charles Schwenda, executive officer of the legation, at first emphatically denied knowledge of the reputed plot. Later, however, he said:

"I can't tell you a thing."

Declines to Talk.

It was learned he telephoned Miss Cora B. Moran, resident manager of the Sixteenth street apartment, and told her not to talk to reporters. Miss Moran said she "knew about the whole thing," but declined to talk unless authorized to do so by Schwenda.

At the legation, an employe readily admitted that members of the Minister's staff were alarmed. He, too, said he had been instructed "not to talk." It was confirmed at the legation, however, that the plot apparently was founded on the Budapest execution. The condemned Hungarian, according to information, was put to death because of communistic activities.

Anthony de Balasy, counselor of the legation, could not be reached for comment last night.

The policemen on guard are under orders to inspect all suitcases and suspicious packages carried by passersby. The uniformed officer on duty at the chancery building has been instructed to keep the rear fire escape under constant watch.

Residents of the apartment building also have expressed apprehension.

Minister Pelenyi left Washington soon after the plot was reported. Legation attaches said it was his custom to return to Hungary each summer.

Veterans Chief Asks Economy In Relief Plans

Disabled Soldiers Advised to Be Conservative in Legislation Program.

Milwaukee, July 22 (AP).—The Disabled American Veterans of the World War were advised today by their national commander, M. A. Harlan, of El Paso, Tex., to be conservative in adopting their program of proposed legislation.

"Just as certainly as we faced retrenchment in 1933, we shall be called upon to face even greater retrenchment at the next session of Congress," he said.

"I am convinced that we are facing a second economy act more drastic, perhaps, than that of March 20, 1933.

"You and I know that this Government of ours cannot continue its present rate of expenditure of public funds.

"We know equally well that immediately following the coming election, economists will start a drive for the reduction of Governmental expenditures, and when that drive is commenced, the appropriation for veteran relief is most certainly going to be the first target of attack."

The veterans heard a similar plea yesterday from Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of the Veterans Bureau.

Greetings from President Roosevelt were read to the convention by Maj. Gen. Charles Kilbourne, of Chicago, commander of the Sixth Corps Area.

The President wrote: "In extending my greetings I desire also to express to you again the appreciation of our Nation to those who served both in time of war and in peace."

Loyalist Units Leave Madrid To Meet Rebels

Five Towns in Albacete Province Are Claimed by Government.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 22.—New advances aginst insurgent forces were claimed tonight by the government as heavy columns of fighting forces pushed from Madrid and strategic points in the north and south.

The government announced that Toledo, Alcala de Henares, Guadalajara, La Granza and Almenza in Albacete Province were in the hands of loyal forces after desperate combats in which aviation played a vital role.

Advices from Toledo said that on arriving outside the city loyal forces took up a strategic position at a powerhouse and cemetery, closing the exits from Alcazar Infantry School, where the insurrectionist cadets were concentrated.

An airplane bombed the structure. Two batteries of artillery from Madrid opened fire while armored cars manned by militia swept the walls with rifles.

Surrender Reported.

After heavy fighting the rebels surrendered numerous prisoners, including many officers, the government communique stated.

Eye witness accounts of the fighting yesterday on Leon Peak and Nava Cerrada Pass related that loyal troops annihilated a rebel column seeking to advance on Madrid.

Loyal troops, heavily entrenched in the mountain pass, drove the rebels back under heavy fire.

All roads outside Madrid were heavily patrolled by civilian militia, especially the road from Escorial through Avila.

Communist and Socialist committees were organized to co-operate with the government attempt to crush "Fascist" revolutionary efforts.

Rebels concentrated at La Granza were beaten and dispersed with the aid of airplanes, the government declared.

Food Conserved.

Madrid was completely supplied with food, but special measures were taken to conserve it and prevent hoarding and price boosting.

For the first time requisitioned automobiles appeared in the streets, luxurious touring cars and sports roadsters alike serving to carry the militia.

They speeded through the streets with rifles and pistols poking through the windows looking for Fascist snipers. Special precautions were taken to guard Madrid's gasoline supplies.

The Montana barracks, once held by rebels, were converted into a food depot for the militiamen who received tobacco free.

supply of the city because of the killing of a group of guards that protect the water aqueduct coming from the mountains. These guards were killed by soldiers of an engineering regiment who left their barracks on the outskirts of Madrid, deserted the government and fled northward to join the rebel force at Segovia.

"Fearing that the water supply may be deliberately cut to deprive the city of water, the embassy has filled all available receptacles and have a good-sized reservoir filled on the roof of the embassy. Unless conditions become desperate, they feel that any one in the embassy will be safe."

Earlier in the day, Wendelin reported hotels occupied by Americans had been under fire for two days.

At Barcelona and Malaga United States consuls were informed officials could not undertake to guarantee the safety of foreigners.

Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, who is at the "summer embassy" at San Sebastian, has not been heard from for more than 24 hours, but State Department officals expressed no great anxiety for his safety. An attempt of the American embassy in Paris to reach him was unsuccessful.

Ship to Start Trip.

Meanwhile, the battleship Oklahoma, ordered to Spain Tuesday, had not yet moved from Cherbourg and is not expected to leave before today, arriving at Balboa tomorrow. It was necessary for the Oklahoma to refuel and many of its officers were on shore leave in France and England. The cruiser Quincy, ordered to Gibraltar, still was steaming eastward, three days out from Norfolk.

At the State Department it was intimated that consideration is being given to the permanent maintenance of a naval squadron in European waters. General uncertainty of the situation there may make this step necessary.

Eric C. Wendelin, Third Secretary of the Embassy at Madrid, the highest ranking American official there, informed the State Department at 3 p. m. (Madrid time) that he had conferred with a group of American businessmen there and that they reached the conclusion the situation was sufficiently grave "to warrant offering the hospitality of the embassy to any Americans who wish to go there."

The department said the embassy was making all possible arrangements to care especially for women and children "and thus keep them two or three days if necessary."

Rebels, Wendelin reported, have cut off the city's food supply and he estimated that food would last for only two more days. He said the embassy is making every effort to lay in canned goods.

The report said irresponsible Communist and Socialist youths are committing more and more acts of depredation. It said these youths have taken over the Hotel National in which there are four Americans, one man and three women. Wendelin said he was sending a messenger to determine the fate of these Americans.

Other hotels housing Americans were reported under fire. Americans have been warned to stay indoors, but Wendelin said some of them insisted on going into the streets. He said it was more luck than anything else that they had not been killed.

The department said there were two guards at the embassy and two at the consulate nearby. Apparently, this is all the armed protection Americans can expect.

Wendelin said armed youths are "requisitioning" automobiles, some of them belonging to Americans, but that officials are too busy with other affairs to do anything about it.

A short time later he sent a brief message relaying a report that government forces had captured Toledo and Gaudalajara.

Consul Lynn W. Franklin at Barcelona reported considerable firing in the streets. He said the president of the Cateline government had told him circumstances made it impossible for him to guarantee the safety of Americans and other foreigners in Barcelona. He reported several hundred Americans in the city.

That some American tourists have been rescued by the British was indicated in a message from Consul George M. Graves. The message was sent from H. M. S. Shamrock, at Gibralter. It had been given to tourists who boarded this British warship, it was explained.

Business Section Fired.

Graves reported the chief business section of the city and the homes of about 50 wealthy Spaniards had been fired and sacked. A building next door to the consulate was on fire. Foreign lives and property have been respected, he said, although the civil governor reported inability to protect foreigners. The request for protection had been made jointly by the American, French and British consuls.

The city, Graves reported, was in control of Communists and Syndicalists, and the military governor and some army officers had been thrown into jail. The rest of the officers and soldiers had joined the Communists and Syndicalists and were patrolling the streets in "borrowed" cars, he said.

Roosevelt Interested.

Meanwhile, it was reported that President Roosevelt is keeping in constant touch with the situation from his yacht off the coast of Nova Scotia. The dispatch of warships to Spain came as a distinct surprise because almost to the time they were ordered to move it had been indicated that such a step was not contemplated. There was a belief in some quarters that the dispatch of the ships had been ordered by President Roosevelt.

British to Fire If Shells Again Hit Gibraltar

Ship Commanders Warned Officials Will Return Bombardment.

By the Associated Press.

Gibraltar (Thursday), July 23.—British authorities early today warned the commanders of Spanish warships that the guns of Gibraltar, one of the world's mightiest fortresses, were ready for instant action.

The British officials declared that if further shells fell on the great rock as a result of the warfare between Spanish rebels and Loyalists, the fire would be returned by British artillery.

Antiaircraft shells burst high over this famous rock last night, and hundreds fled for shelter from an air-sea battle between loyal Spanish warships and a rebel fleet of war planes.

Exploding shells menaced the British city. Residents and refugees were panicky. Splinters crashed at Europa, southernmost point of the rock; a "dud" plumped into the sea near a commercial coal mole; a shell blew apart high over the Catholic cathedral; shrapnel fell near the luxurious rock hotel, high on the west face of Gibraltar.

After the last planes headed back across the straits to north Africa, two chimneys and a roof garden on the hotel were found to have been damaged by exploding shells.

The warships, lying off the rebel hotbeds of Algeciras and La Linea, trained their guns on the bombarding planes as the fliers dodged low to escape the vicious fire.

The rebel planes roared over in two flights, the second group of four drawing the heaviest strafing. The aim of the gunners was poor, however, and none apparently was touched.

(A Fascist radio broadcast from Seville, picked up in Lisbon, Portugal, said rebel planes had sunk three Liberalist government warships off Cadiz. The ships were bombarding the town, the broadcast said.)

The bombardment off Gibraltar came as a climax to a tense day in which a dozen loyal craft off the coast threatened to shell rebel strongholds. The latter replied with a threat to summon aircraft which would "sink them in 10 minutes."

In the loyal fleet were the cruisers Jaime I, the Libertad and the Cervantes. Their crewmen were refused permission to enter Gibraltar for supplies, and British gunners, as a precautionary measure, manned positions on the upper rock.

Meanwhile, a British and a Norwegian steamer reached port with stories of close escapes from bombardment attendant on the aerial-naval war in the narrow passage between the mainland and Morocco.

Fifteen thousand refugees from Spain and Morocco flooded Gibraltar, threatening the colony with a food shortage.

There were several Americans, including Miss Henrietta Osder, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who told of the rebel bombardment of Spanish ships off Tangier, internationalized Morocco, and the Misses Madeline Maquire and Isabelle Barry, of Washington, refugees from fire-razed Malaga.

(Loyal troops, said a Rabat (French Morocco) dispatch, captured the southern Spanish port of Almeria, with the help of the cruiser Lepante. There was a "lively combat," the dispatch added.)

800 Rebels Poised for Raid.

Vera, Spain, July 22 (AP).—Eight hundred rebels, under the command of Col. Villanueva, waited for orders tonight to move on Irun, Spain's northrn railway terminus.

The reported plan of action was to join two other rebel columns of the northern insurgent army, one now in San Sebastian and the other moving up the valley behind Irun. (At Paris word was received the northern forces were within 50 miles of Madrid.)

In the drive, one of the objectives was the state munition factory at Eibar, midway between San Sebastian and Bilbao.

Contact between the converging columns of the rebel army was maintained by airplane. Late today one plane circled low over this worn town and a bundle of dispatches was tossed out to waiting officers below.

For residents of Vera, the airplanes have become a symbol of the uncertainty which pervades the entire northern district of Spain. Children in the streets waved their handkerchiefs at the low-flying ships to show their friendliness.

The position of the carabineros, green-clad frontier police, was particularly tragic. Of approximately 100 in this region most of them have been pressed into service by the Liberals, while others have joined the rebels.

Rebels Marching on Madrid

many civilians inexperienced in military matters, are hastening to points north of Madrid to halt the advance of the rebels.

The southern force, commanded by Gen. Francisco Franco, was estimated at 30,000, while Gen. Mola had 10,000 men advancing on the capital. Mola's troops were supported by approximately 7,500 "Carlists," a motley collection of armed sympathizers wearing red berets and red and white bands.

Spain's metropolitan army totals only 80,000 men. Thus, according to rebel statements, Gen. Mola and Gen. Franco between them have half of the organized and trained forces of the nation under their command. In addition, they have all of the famed Spanish Foreign Legion and the Moroccan troops, reputed to be Spain's best soldiers.

The rebels, according to a spokesman, also have a majority of the nation's artillery. The government apparently holds an advantage in aviation, however, although the rebels insist they have plenty of planes that can be brought into action immediately.

A rebel plane bombed the Enderlaz Bridge which reds damaged badly yesterday in an attempt to check Mola's advance.

The United Press correspondent returned to Hondaye tonight after a tour through Navarra Province, northern Spain, in order to send this dispatch. While in Navarra the correspondent communicated with Burgos, Gen. Mola's headquarters, by telegraph.

The rebels apparently are in complete control of northern Navarra and the neighboring province of Burgos. They declared martial law and issued a decree that all persons participating in lockouts or strikes may be punished by death. The Navarra rebel headquarters ruled that there is sufficient work for everybody, and those not working or fighting should be shot.

Authoritative sources said the purpose of the revolution is to establish a military dictatorship, similar to that of the late Primo de Rivera. However, at present the rebels are more occupied with overthrowing the left-wing government of President Manuel Azana than in deciding the form of the prospective new government.

On a tour of Navarra, the reporter passed the last strongholds of the loyalists at Irun and went through ominously deserted territoy. The villages were bristling with potential snipers as he reached the veritable "no man's land" between rebel and loyalist outposts. The loyalists are threatened with annihilation by Mola's two converging columns.

The most decisive and bloodiest battle of the civil war will be waged Friday when rebels hope to storm Madrid, Navarra insurgents said.

Besides the two columns marching on the capital under Generals Franco and Mola there was a third mystery column whose origin and elements were unknown here. It was believed to be composed mostly of Monarchist elements which were moving as rapidly as the Fascist Republicans.

The first detachment of artillery left Navarra Province for Madrid. It was accompanied by ambulance units. Trucks rumbled along the roads with soldiers sitting back to back. Women waved and cheered from windows along the road.

Rebel ranks were swelled by the adhesion of peasants as ultraconservative Navarra marched solidly against Red Madrid. Reapers were standing in the fields where their owners left them. Horses were standing patiently attached to plows —to which the farmers may never return. These were among the evidences of hasty departures from peaceful pursuits to what may be the bloodiest battle in the Spanish republic's bloodiest revolt.

Electrolux is the only automatic refrigerator in the world with no moving parts—continued low operating cost—absolute and everlasting silence.

ONE THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHT REFRIGERATORS INSTALLED IN WASHINGTON IN 90 DAYS! Such is the amazing record of Electrolux, the Gas Refrigerator. And popularity justly deserved! Refrigerator buyers everywhere are recognizing in Electrolux important advantages to be found in no other automatic refrigerator. A tiny gas flame takes the place of all moving parts. Without friction or wear, it operates through the years as efficiently and economically as the day it is installed. For the same reason, it is silent when you buy it and does not grow noisy with age. See Electrolux before you buy!

Reckord Maps 29th Division's Camp Program

Motor Transport Will Be Stressed, the Commander Says Over the Radio.

An outline of the program to be followed by the Twenty-ninth Division of the National Guard in the Third Corps Area during its maneuvers in Pennsylvania from August 8 to 22 was given by Gen. Milton A. Reckord, the commanding officer, in a radio address over WMAL last night.

He described the concentration the troops from Washington, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania will make at Indiantown Gap, 20 miles east of Harrisburg.

"Since this is the first concentration of the Blue and Gray Division since the World War, we are looking forward to a new, profitable and memorable experience," said Gen. Reckord.

Motor transport will be especially stressed throughout the encampment, and most troop movements will be made by truck, Gen. Reckord asserted. War games, with divisional defense and attack, will be staged August 17, 18, 19 and 20.

The grand divisional review will be held August 21, with officials from the Third Corps Area as guests of honor.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Summer Concerts Association presents the second program at the Potomac Watergate, with Alfred Wallenstein as guest conductor and Eunice Norton as piano soloist. Program: Overture to "Der Freischuetz" (Weber), Concerto in A minor for pianoforte (Schumann), "Les Preludes" (Liszt), excerpts from "Afro-American" symphony (William Grant Still), "Perpetuum Mobile: Musikalischer Scherz" and "Kaiserwalzer" (Johann Strauss the Younger), overture to "Semiramide" (Rossini).

For some reason best known to amusement managers, who have a fund of experence regarding the best nights in the week, last evening's assemblage at the Watergate was not as large as the audience that heard the opening concert of the series Sunday. The stone steps were as crowded as before, but the flanking chairs in the reserved section were thinly populated, and there was not so thick a fringe of standees along the parapets. Nevertheless, the gathering was of impressive size, and there was plenty of enthusiasm.

Proceedings were begun with the overture to "Der Freischeutz," which one may call Exhibit A of the fine flower of German romanticism on the operatic stage. It contains that exact juxtaposition of fancy, sentiment and terror which characterized the school at its zenith. Although that particular phase of emotional excitation has gone out of fashion during the 115 years that have elapsed since Weber's work was first performed in Berlin, the beauties of the musical expression endure for our delectation.

The Schumann concerto is a romanticism of another type; an expression of inner emotional life in the purest poesy. Schumann was the counterpart in music of Jean Paul Richter in prose; a gentle and dreamy nature full of kindliness to all the world and full of fervor for "the good, the true and the beautiful."

Eunice Norton, who has fleet fingers and a good range of dynamics, exhibited both power and delicacy in her reading of the solo part. She was sturdy when necessary and lightly poised in the lyric passages. As to her rapport with the composer, one cannot speak definitely, for the open air is unkind to a pianist in matters of tonal nuance and interpretation. Her performance was at least spirited, and there was a considerable waste of energy in gratuitous gestures.

Liszt's well-worn symphonic poem, "Les Preludes," retains its vitality, as do most of the major works of this programmatic pioneer. Possibly its symbology is the secret of its unceasing appeal to audiences. But there are other symphonic poems from the same pen that are never performed these days, and that deserve resuscitation.

Each of the movements of William Grant Still's "Afro-American" symphony is in itself interesting because of the sincerity of the writing and the autochthonous quality of the music. Mr. Wallenstein was wise in presenting excerpts, for the work has more of the characteristics of a suite than of an integral symphony.

Strauss' amusing attempt to solve the problem of perpetual motion in music was coupled with one of the less frequently heard waltzes, and the combination was a pleasant one. The program was closed with the scintillant but thin overture to Rossini's "Semiramide."

The newly installed amplifying system will require some adjustment before it is satisfactory. It was used during the opening number, and turned on for a few minutes during the concert, but the results were distorting. The mechanism itself mumbled and grumbled like Fafnier, and the tones which came through this monologue were raucous.

Callaghan Brothers Renew Legal Battle for Park Land

Chevy Chase Residents Again Seek to Obtain Title to Section in Answer to Suit Brought by Commission.

Two Chevy Chase brothers yesterday renewed a battle to obtain title to a section of land in Rock Creek Park when they filed an answer to the injunction suit brought by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to restrain the two from interfering with work on the tract.

The men, William J. and Michael P. Callaghan, through their counsel, Miss Vivian Simpson, contend that they are the rightful owners of the property. Their claim is based on their contention that they have occupied the land for the past 35 years and are entitled to ownership under the statute that provides title to unrecorded land may be secure through adverse possession for 20 years.

The park and planning commission obtained a patent for the property recently from the State land commissioner in Annapolis and has started to convert the land to park use. The Callaghans contend that the land commissioner could not properly issue the patent and are seeking redress in the county circuit court.

Among other representations the Callaghans declare that their title to the land was recognized several years ago by the park commission to the extent that attempts were made to purchase the land from them, notwithstanding the fact that a survey made eight years ago disclosed the lack of a recorded title. Negotiations for purchase of the land ended, the Callaghans assert, when they declined to accept the offer of the park commission and condemnation proceedings were allowed to lapse.

The Silver Spring Business Men's Association has dropped its campaign to secure a public ambulance for the Silver Spring area, it was announced yesterday. The move was taken after the association was informed that Warner E. Pumphrey, local funeral director, had promised to make his private ambulance available to the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department for emergency calls.

The association's drive to curb speeding in the town will be continued, however, although some dissatisfaction was expressed at the weekly meeting with the results obtained to date. Meanwhile the county police have been asked to continue their extra patrolling to nab offenders.

Frank Bane, director of the Social Security Board, will speak on "The Social Security Program" at the second annual meeting of the Montgomery County Welfare Board Friday night, July 31, at the Manor Club, near Norbeck, Md.

The annual report for the year 1935-36 will be distributed at the business meeting over which the board chairman, Miss Lavinia Engle, will preside. The meeting will open at 7:30 and will be preceded by the board's annual supper. Reservations may be made with the board in Rockville up to Tuesday, July 28.

The annual outing of the Rockville Chamber of Commerce will be held today at Bay Ridge. Members of the chamber and many other residents and officials of the county will travel in a motorcade which will leave Rockville at 10 a. m.

An extensive program of sports and other features has been arranged and the facilities of the play area will be open to those who attend. Roger Shaw is general chairman of the outing.

Officers of Cissel-Saxon Post American Legion, were elected at the annual meeting at Silver Spring as follows: Commander, H. Walton Redmile; first vice commander, Thurman C. Metcalf; second vice commander, Ronald McDonald; adjutant and finance officer; Charles J. Clifford; historian, George Tighlman; chaplain, W. Talmage Miller; sergeant at arms, Sidney Walter, and colorbearers, Eugene Lincoln and Edward Cole. The executive committee will be composed of the officers and John J. Geary, Lauman T. Faulconer, Howard W. Cutler, J. W. Stone, and Joseph C. Cissel. Delegates to the Montgomery County Council are Redmile, Clifford, McDonald, Tilghman, and Metcalf. Delegates to the Southern Maryland Council are Redmile, Cissel and Faulconer. Faulconer and Redmile were named delegates to the State convention of the American Legion in Baltimore next month and alternates are Metcalf and Giusta.

DON'T SCRATCH, SOOTHE THE IRRITATION

Quick relief from the maddening itch of eczema, psoriasis, poison ivy, and irritation about the rectum or personal parts is obtained by applying an ointment called Resinol. Leave it on over night. It lessens the desire to scratch, and eases the irritation.

The soothing effect of Resinol takes the sting out of the irritated parts and makes you comfortable. The skin heals sooner, too, with the help of Resinol.

The oily base of Resinol Ointment is ideal for penetrating the outer layers of the skin and securing deeper action. Bathing the affected parts first with Resinol Soap hastens the effectiveness of Resinol Ointment. Many nurses suggest and use Resinol—why don't you try it?

Buy Resinol Ointment and Soap in any drug store. For free sample, write to Resinol, Dept. 4, Baltimore, Md.

D. C. Milk Price Plan Attacked By Mrs. Boyle

Head of Consumers' Unit Says Proposal Will Be Fought in Capital.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Washington Consumers Council, told farmers and officials at an Agricultural Adjustment Administration hearing yesterday that her organization would fight a proposed milk marketing agreement in the District.

"One of our weapons," she declared, "will be a campaign for a municipally owned and operated pasteurizing plant, and the other will be a campaign to induce Congress to allow milk from outside the Washington milkshed to compete with the local product."

Mrs. Boyle was attacking a proposed milk marketing agreement which, she considers, would eliminate the sale of milk in the District at 10 cents a quart. Milk is now supplied at that price by the Highland Dairy Farm, distributors of 8,000 to 10,000 quarts here daily.

The proposed agreement was termed illegal by Mrs. Boyle. "It is clearly contrary to law for milk dealers or other merchants to combine to put out of business an undesirable competitor?" she said.

"Seek Monopoly."

"Yet this is precisely what the agreement is designed to do, so that we have the surprising spectacle of a group of milk dealers inviting the United States Government to aid them in establishing a monopoly and to protect them while engaged in monopolistic practices."

Mrs. Boyle had with her a petition protesting the proposal to allow the Government to control the amount and price of milk produced for the District. It was signed, she said, by 10,000 consumers.

The Consumers' Council of which Mrs. Boyle is chairman, is composed of women's clubs, the Washington Parent-Teacher Association, the Federation of Citizens Associations and labor unions.

Matthew F. Boyd, second vice president of the council, joined with Mrs. Boyle in attacking the proposed marketing agreement. He made the distributors his particular target.

"The council is not opposed to the farmer," Boyd said. "We feel that he is entitled to a minimum price for his product. Our fight is with the distributor. Producers' higher income and consumers' lower milk prices might come out of the distributors' margin. Our three-fold objective is higher incomes to farmers, lower prices to consumers and less profits to the distributors."

Mather Disagrees.

Boyd said that the agreement would result in the elimination of milk at the 10-cent price. This, he said, would deprive school children and persons on relief "of the most essential food—milk."

E. O. Mather, chairman of the hearing, disagreed with Boyd. "I'm frank to say," he declared, "I am unable to see how this will eliminate 10-cent milk."

After listening for some time to Boyd's Oxonian accent, Dr. E. H. Marstellar, a Manassas, Va., dairyman, said he thought Boyd was "just a foreign labor agitator." He then accused Boyd of ignorance of the matter when the council representative predicted an end to 10-cent milk in the District if the agreement went into effect.

A Great Teacher.

A century ago, American schoolboys yawned over a certain "reader" containing a poem which pleaded:

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in thy flight!"

Time didn't obey, but had it alternatively turned forward, so that the pupils of those days could have seen their country as it is today, they would have thought more highly of their dog's-eared texts. For this week celebrations are being held in honor of the centennial of the first publication of the very blue-backed volumes which youth of the Van Buren era held so listlessly in its hands. More than that, collectors now are bidding high sums for the rare copies of those books still extant.

It was in 1836, while he was president of Cincinnati College, that William Holmes McGuffey compiled the First Reader, which began the famous series of McGuffey's Eclectic Readers. The First Reader was designed to initiate the littlest front-row pupils into the mysteries of print and contained such selections as "Mary Had a Little Lamb" and the sad tale of the rat that escaped Fido only to be snapped up by the cat.

The Second Reader moved on to considerations of the "mooly cow, mooly cow, home from the wood," and so the series progressed through the Sixth Reader, each a bit more sophisticated than the last. The books ran through many editions and became the principal literary fountains for millions of boys and girls in the little red schoolhouses (except, for some undetermined reason, in New England) that dotted the Nation in the latter half of the nineteenth century.

Mark Sullivan, in his volume of "Our Times" which treats of "America Finding Herself," considers the Readers at some length. He is persuaded that the moral precepts in them, particularly the earlier volumes, "left their record in the ideals held, and to some extent lived up to, by several American generations." And the abundance of affectionate reminiscences he has gathered from men throughout the country tend to confirm his point.

The Readers were melancholy, yes, but such was the fashion of the times; they were moralistic, they had little humor, they were merely reprints of other men's writings—to all this Mr. Sullivan agrees. But, he submits, they "imparted a love of good reading to multitudes of Americans."

It is fitting, then, that the Nation should now pay tribute to the memory of that good old Scotch Presbyterian, McGuffey. For, if Amiel's wisdom is to be trusted, he was a great teacher, made doubly valuable because his work coincided with the moment when public education was beginning its rapid development in the United States. "To know how to suggest," wrote Amiel in his Journal, "is the great art of teaching."

But Yet A Woman.

Two of the charges most commonly made against Modern Woman form, when considered together, a perfect paradox.

On the one hand, she is accused of being more frivolous than her forebears. On the other, when a woman enters the serious professions, she is said to practice them with a concentrated zeal far exceeding that of the male practitioner. Thus the feminine lawyer is denounced as an intolerant literalist while the winners of beauty contests are widely regarded as fickle and harebrained.

Source material for these charges might be found in literature and legend. There was the highly legalistic argument of Portia before the chief magistrate of Venice. And then there was Helen, popularly adjudged the "Miss Greece" of her time, who caused much trouble by running off with a member of the Trojan smart set.

The current news, however, indicates that accusations based on such foundations must be modified. Magistrate Anna M. Kross, of New York, has not only discharged a group of men and women taken into custody for gambling in the private apartment of one of their number, but has also told the arresting policemen to "stop snooping" and "get some real criminals." On the same day, "Miss America of 1935" announces her marriage to the sweetheart of her childhood, her "first and only beau," who, being out of a job, is off to Oklahoma to look for one.

There are no good reasons why a woman lawyer should not be expected to interpret the law liberally. There is no reason at all why a beautiful girl should not be as unselfishly sentimental as her homelier sisters.

Dispersing A Nation.

War is terrible under any circumstances. It is particularly so in the case of civil war, when the authority of the state breaks down and people of common blood, language and traditions are arrayed in arms against each other. But the most tragic form of all is civil war on which is superimposed a merciless class struggle, making the combat not merely sectional but one which divides every village, town and city throughout the land.

The utter chaos reflected by the current dispatches from Spain is an indication of the disintegrating character of the class war now raging throughout the length and breadth of that country. There are no well-defined tactical battles such as that which was re-enacted on the seventy-fifth anniversary of Manassas this week. On the contrary there are proceeding simultaneously a countless number of bloody episodes which threaten the continuation of civil government in every corner of the republic. In a relatively short time disorders of this sort must produce either dictatorship or complete collapse of the structure of local civilization.

The incidents reported are illuminating. The officers of a warship seek to join the rebellion. The crew resist this mutiny from above, kill the captain and throw his body overboard. In Madrid, Communist workers seize a conservative club and announce that henceforth this will be their headquarters.

In each case loyalty to the government involves anarchic action: disobedience to superior officers, unauthorized confiscation of private property. Multiply these illustrations a thousand-fold and the significance of the breakdown in Spain begins to become apparent. Victory for either side will now be an extremist triumph. President Azana's dream of a liberal, progressive republic is ended. The question is whether Fascism or Communism will supplant it.

It would be comforting to the rest of the world if it could reasonably attribute present conditions in Spain entirely to local characteristics. Of course the political influence of military leaders, the economic power of the church, the revolutionary tendencies of labor, the weakness of the liberal tradition, the poverty of the peasantry—all these and more are factors giving proximate explanation of the Spanish upheaval. But beyond these are conditions which today prevail everywhere, and which are particularly influential in Spain only because the surface factors there were such as to encourage rather than oppose the present outburst.

Put in the simplest terms, faction and group ambition had in Spain been allowed to develop to a stage where they endangered national welfare. Consciousness of class and rank and title, of privite economic interest and mass hostility thereto, have broken down consciousness of the principles underlying national unity. To some extent this is what happened in Russia, Germany and Italy, all of them weakened and disorganized by the strain of war. Now it is happening in Spain, which was not essentially strengthened by its wartime prosperity. It is all too likely to happen in any nation which, through ignorance or selfishness, forgets its essentially corporate character.

In his thought-provoking study on "The Revolt of the Masses" a great Spanish intellectual threw light in advance on what is happening in Spain today. The state, says Senor Ortega y Gasset, is "not a thing, but a movement." It is "at every moment something which comes from and goes to. . . . When there is a stoppage of that impulse toward something further on, the state automatically succumbs. The unity which previously existed and seemed to be its physical foundation—race, language, natural frontier—becomes useless; the state breaks up, is dispersed, atomized."

Five Important Posts.

Approximately 150 candidates are said to have applied for appointment to the new Maritime Commission authorized by Congress just before the recent adjournment. Since only five commissioners are to be chosen, the great majority of the candidates must necessarily be disappointed. And if the President considers solely the public interest, the entire list of mere office-seekers will be discarded. For this is obviously a case in which the position should seek the man.

Mr. Roosevelt is said to regard these appointments in terms of representation for the Commerce, Navy and Postoffice Departments and for industrial and labor groups The act requires him to select five persons with "due regard to their special fitness for the efficient discharge of the duties imposed upon them." Certainly one commissioner should be drawn from the Department of Commerce. For this post Joseph B. Weaver, head of the Bureau of Navigation, seems to be the logical choice.

As a representative of the Navy's viewpoint Admiral Rock may well be considered. He could likewise be expected to give the commission full advantage of his technical knowledge concerning ship construction. Perhaps the Postoffice Department should also be represented because of the necessity of liquidating existing ocean mail contracts. In view of the fact that the new subsidies are to be divorced from contracts for carrying the mails, however, the postal representative could be given a short term.

Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, has been suggested as a logical choice because of his recognized ability to handle difficult labor problems. Reasonable adjustment of labor disputes among seamen is almost certain to be one of the first important issues by which the commission will be faced. It is a field in which Mr. McGrady is highly experienced.

To balance the influence of men selected from official circles an outstanding authority on shipping from private life might well be chosen. Prof. H. L. Seward, of Yale University, has been appropriately suggested for this role. Another commissioner with similar qualifications might be very properly appointed. Indeed, the selection of individuals merely to represent some department or private group is not nearly so important as the choice of men with experience, training and recognized capacity in dealing with the problems that the Maritime Commission will have to meet.

The Issue Joined.

The twelve unions represented in the Committee for Industrial Organization have unequivocally refused to appear before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to answer charges of fomenting insurrection. In a letter breathing defiance, John L. Lewis, as chairman of the C. I. O., denies the right of the council to expel or suspend the offending unions and challenges the personal qualifications of council members to sit in judgment upon them. The tone and content of the Lewis reply are so uncompromising, indeed, as virtually to preclude hope of an amicable settlement of the controversy through the agency of the executive council.

In the likely event of suspension of the Lewis group of unions, the next step would be an appeal to the A. F. of L. convention at its fall meeting. That is the only satisfactory method of procedure, in any case, since it is quite evident that, regardless of its official prerogatives, the executive council is scarcely qualified to pass upon a controversy involving the status of 40 per cent of the A. F. of L. membership.

Even if the council has not prejudged the issue, as Mr. Lewis asserts, it is unquestionably dominated by the heads of crafts unions. Consciously or unconsciously, the attitude of these men toward a nonconformist group of industrial unions will be colored by their training, their affiliations and, in some cases, their purely personal and selfish interests.

Mr. Lewis does not pull his punches when he says that the heads of certain craft unions represented on the council fear the inclusion of industrial unions as "a jeopardy to their own dead-hand control of the federation." He also accuses the council members of adopting a "defeatist," or "wholly obstructionist" attitude toward the organization of workers who do not fit into craft categories. In view of the record of nonachievement in the mass production industries, such charges cannot be attributed merely to personal hostility between the council and the Lewis adherents.

While individual ambitions and personal rivalries undoubtedly play a large part in intensifying the bitterness of the conflict within the A. F. of L., they should not be permitted to obscure the fundamental cause of the dispute. It must be evident by this time that a serious and possibly a permanent cleavage in the ranks of organized labor is imminent unless its leaders are willing to make sacrifices for the sake of extending the benefits of an adequate form of unionism to unorganized groups.

If the case for the industrial unions is again presented to the A. F. of L. convention by the Lewis adherents, the chances are that the arguments will fall on more receptive ears. The Lewis faction has now attained formidably large proportions and it has shown that it means to carry on its organization campaign with or without federation backing. Thus the A. F. of L. members can no longer play for time. They will be compelled to decide whether to modify their policies and assist the spread of the industrial union, or to split the labor movement in two as the price of maintaining the dominance of craft unionism.

Literary Loves

Whit Burnet in Story Magazine.

A poet of our acquaintance, Edward Davison, once of England and a friend of Frost and Shakespeare, will contend, all evening if need be, that Kipling's "If" has values, for some, which he would be the last to scoff at. The Russian Ivan Bunin, whose own literary style has a vague and shadowy quality hard to carry over into English, was the man who lovingly translated Henry Wadsworth Longfellow into Russian; and the favorite author of the esoteric Gertrude Stein, as we mentioned in these pages once before, is, of all the authors living, P. G. Wodehouse; although her favorite reading, in general, is the newspapers.

James Joyce, when a cataract was claiming his eyesight and it was not known whether he would end by being totally blind, used to relax of an afternoon from the multilingual strain of his hierachic topioftical prose and sit back quietly to listen to his American secretary, a man from Georgia and now a sports writer on a New York paper, read him "The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.

It would be hard to say which makes the most noise when on the fence—a tomcat or a candidate.

The story that never grows old: A candidate telling the taxpayer that he will take less from him and give more to him.

Specter Of "Little Pigs."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is truly a shame that a tender-hearted and religious-minded woman, such as your correspondent, Mrs. Gertrude M. Donovan, should be made to suffer needlessly for the supposed sins of her Government. I can assure her that no cattle and no grain have ever been destroyed by this Government as part of any agricultural program. This erroneous notion has been spread by writers and radio speakers with more attention to effect than to truth.

During the drought of two years ago cattle were removed from the stricken ranges. Those that could be placed on good pasturage elsewhere were saved. The remainder were slaughtered. The meat, many millions of pounds, was given to the needy unemployed. Surely this was preferable to leaving these cattle to starve?

Far from destroying grain, this Government has taken pains that never were taken before in our history that food should not spoil while there were hungry to be fed. Through the Surplus Commodities Corporation it has sought out, bought up and distributed to the people on relief, food crops that the farmer intended to leave unharvested because of low prices. Mrs. Donovan will be heartened if she will write to the Secretary of Agriculture and ask to be told about the kinds and quantities of food thus saved and actually distributed to people in need. During the floods of last spring, quantities of this salvaged food was moved promptly into the flooded towns and kept the people from hunger.

The only instance that a stretch of imagination could call food destruction by this Government was the case of the "little pigs," an acknowledged desperate remedy for a desperate situation. Here, too, all the usable meat was saved and distributed to the needy who were benefited to the extent of a million pounds of meat by this program. Was that a crime? To be sure, had the farmers continued to feed the little pigs corn for a number of months more, there would have been more meat, but that would have bankrupted the farmers. Would that have been to the national advantage? G. W.

Washington, July 23.

"False Witness."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The press recently carried a report of a radio address by Father Coughlin wherein he charged—rather indicted—President Roosevelt with having loaded upon the backs of the people an indebtedness of some $34,000,000,000.

A half truth is sometimes—very often—more to be condemned than a falsehood manufactured out of the whole cloth. This charge of Father Coughlin has not the merit of even one-fifth of the truth. The purpose on the part of Father Coughlin is self-evidently mendacious, for we cannot attribute it to ignorance. What is the truth?

On March 3, 1933, the national debt was some $21,000,000,000. Therefore to that extent Father Coughlin's statement is untrue. In the difference between that sum and the indebtedness at the time of Father Coughlin's charge there was in the Treasury of the United States about $3,000,000,000. There were also in the hands of the Government several billion dollars of solvent indebtedness due to the United States from banks, railroads, home and farm owners, cities, towns, counties and States, possibly additional amounts from other sources. To the extent of these amounts, as stated, several billion dollars, Father Coughlin's statement is untrue.

Not only from Father Coughlin do we hear this untruthful charge, but from many sources with equal purpose to misrepresent and deceive, are we constantly hearing this indictment. Is this Presidential election to be conducted upon a basis of misrepresentation, hatred and abuse? HARRY PEYTON.

Voteless Resignation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why do Washington people allow themselves to be eternally stirred up over anything? The result is always the same. We will have one-man cars just as we had our parks made over and our trees cut down. The newspapers permit us to blow off a little steam in their columns, but the plans go on.

I was told that I might like the parks when they were finished. I do not. I am not going to like the second-hand cars, either.

The Responsibilities Of The Press.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Felix Morley's address before the Institute of Public Affairs, reproduced in Sunday's Post, displayed thoughtfulness and skillful analysis, but left unsolved the question of how the voters can be assured of unbiased information on which to exercise the critical faculty he advocates.

Freedom of the press ought to involve responsibilities as well as rights, it seems to me, and if newspapers want to live up to their responsibilities, they ought to give both sides of political battles.

This does not mean merely reporting what spokesmen for both parties say. Every good reporter has a bias, and every reporter, without instructions, knows what bias his owner and editor want, and acts accordingly.

The only answer to the problem, therefore, is to have two daily stories on the chief events of a campaign, each written by a reporter generally at least sympathetic to the side about which he is writing.

The Post is new, or at least its present ownership and management is; it could make a real place for itself in the present campaign by having a Roosevelt as well as a Landon bias.

A Radio Voice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This afternoon I tuned in my radio and immediately caught a voice from the Evangelistic-Townsendistic-Monolistic meeting in Cleveland. The speaker was creating more heat than light, covering or attempting to cover, one broad subject after another, uttering a few sentences on one subject and then switching to another.

I concluded that it was some overzealous member of the assembly who had been permitted to make "a few remarks," and no one was attempting to shut him off. I dialed to another station without knowing the name of the speaker.

Reading Felix Bruner in the early edition of your paper, I learned that the voice I had heard was that of none other than Representative Lempke.

And he would aspire to the Presidency of the great United States! I won't say, God save the country, for the common sense of the common people will attend to that.

Rock Creek's Debris.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Won't the entomologists of the Smithsonian come to our rescue by introducing a species of amphibious termite into the bed of picturesque Rock Creek? Or must we await another flood, or series of floods, to move the accumulated debris swept from its upper reaches a few miles farther on its journey to the sea?

Logs, timbers, demolished flatboats, etc., certainly add nothing to the charm of this otherwise idyllic watercourse. And the tourists—ah, yes—there are the tourists!

Echoes In Famous Buildings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What the Blarney Stone has been to the tourist trade of Ireland, the echo in the Hall of Statuary is to the Capitol guides. Your city edition of July 15, carrying a photograph of the apparatus used, a diagram and news article about my echo exploration, was a very useful attack on this mystery. With several additional points, the matter should become entirely clear to all.

Whispers are characterized by little high-pitched sounds. We used a shrill whistle and the high-pitched noises from jingling a bunch of keys. The undirected sound of the keys, free to spread in all directions, was undeniably reflected from the narrow, smooth strip near the edge of the arch.

The simple echo here discussed is not to be confused with the multiple echoing and re-echoing known as reverberation. The reverberation of a middle C tuning fork, sounded on a resonating box and then damped out, was found to last about six seconds in the hall empty. In contrast, the guides will testify that when using the listening posts, there is no lapse of time whatever which can be detected by ordinary means.

Lastly, there are other famous whispering chambers, for example, in the Mormon Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, and in St. Paul's Cathedral, London; but our echo is to be accounted for differently. The roof of the Mormon Tabernacle is said to be a portion of an ellipsoid of revolution, shaped something like the "shoe" which one puts in an auto tire-casing to cover a hole. Such a surface has been so constructed that all parts of it bear a constant relationship to two points in the interior called focus points. So long as one stands at one of these focal points when he whispers, the law of reflection (angle of reflection equals angle of incidence) holds for every place on the roof which the sound waves strike, sending them down to the other focal point.

In the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, Lord Rayleigh showed, in 1904, that the whispers follow the curved wall to the other side, and may be intercepted by a low barrier placed against the wall.

On the other hand, the echo from the arch in the Hall of Statuary, is reflected from a portion of a "sound mirror" shaped like a cylinder, the central axis of the cylinder being at floor-level. The guide's mouth is about 5 feet inside the "center of curvature," as we say. With respect to the middle, top, or vertex of the "mirror," this tends to give an "image" at a point a little back of the brass plate and a little better than 5 feet below the floor-level; that is, outside the "center of curvature" and nearer the wall than was the source.

But because the whole mirror is acting, there is an effect called "spherical aberration" which causes a "wandering of the focus," or a "caustic." Place a wedding ring on a white surface in bright sunlight and see how the reflections from one side cross over behind those from the middle of the reflecting area. This happens at the Capitol with the difference that all the sunrays are parallel when they hit the mirror, whereas the whisper-waves of the guide are spreading out like concentric balloons swelling up in all directions, one after another, from a common source.

Nearly all the reflected portions over-shoot or under-shoot the listener's ears which are "mounted" about 10 feet above the true focus. Only the reflection from the one area, on its way to join the "caustic," drops casually into the ear. A slight spreading of reflected whisper-beams from the other areas permits faint effects from them to reach the experimenter's receiver when turned in the various directions. The principal effect, however, is chargeable to two or three square feet of arch surface at the spot heretofor specified.

I nominate this hitherto mysterious voice, definitely identified on July 2 and 3, to be christened, "The Spirit of '76."

Dumb Animal Friends.

Post Office, Thursday.

"WE can, I believe, get a more plentiful supply of food, cheaper and better, by processing the products of the soil, instead of asking cows and chickens to do it for us."

That's what Mr. Henry Ford was quoted as saying the other day. Do you see what it means?

It means that Mr. Ford, having got rid of horses, is now going to extend, immediately, his excesses of extermination all the way to lower animal life in the agricultural and dairy districts, and eventually to all the so-called brute creation everywhere.

Well, we don't like it—even if we do write these words in Washington in the good old summertime, where and when the lowest brute creation is too much with us. And the Detroit News doesn't like it. And there's a correspondent of this Column who says that he doesn't like it, either.

Out of courtesy to the visiting firemen, listen to the Detroit News first.

It expects that Mr. Ford will succeed in his endeavors, because he has a fixed habit of success, and it's difficult to break the habits of a man of Mr. Ford's age. Above all, the Detroit News admits that Mr. Ford's point of view is natural enough—for him:

"A manufacturer who believes in efficiency and economy must," says that newspaper, "shudder whenever he sees a cow. For the cow is an extremely incompetent machine. A cow spends all day making a few quarts of milk, and she doesn't package her product; it has to be separated from her."

The pig is just as bad. "The amount of food a pig consumes to produce a pork shank you simply wouldn't believe, and it takes him years to do it . . . A good machine should turn out a ham, sugar-cured and wrapped, in a few minutes.

And the hen! The hen, the Detroit News confesses, "collects a lot of raw materials and turns them out in the form of one egg—in a brittle shell—yet to hear her cackle you'd think she had laid a V-8." Were the hen "truly efficient, she would lay a dozen eggs at a time, in a pasteboard carton, and, fed the proper amount of sugar, butter and flour, should be able to lay a cake."

No, the Detroit News sighs, "we never get anywhere by waiting for nature. Nature never yet built an automobile."

Still, that newspaper doesn't approve of Mr. Ford—notwithstanding that it is a Detroit newspaper. It will miss, it whispers, its roast-beef. It won't find any adventure in getting a poached egg out of a tin can.

And what's to become of the romance of the zoo?

It's a strange thing that the same mail which brought this complaint of the Detroit News to our little desk brought also the letter we are now about to quote. If we didn't believe in coincidence, we shouldn't believe our eyes. But we do believe in coincidence, so we give you that letter.

Dear Post-Impressionist:

I see that Mr. Ford has come out against alleged lower animals. I don't mind if he doesn't want to wear woolen clothes, and I don't mind what his women-folk will say to him when there aren't any more furs for them to put on. Also, I am told that the last demand for whalebone disappeared long ago, and that Mae West, for all her popularity with a certain sex, hasn't been able to sell more than half-a-dozen whales in the course of her whole curved career.

But I would like to know what Mr. Ford is going to do when he feels lonely. What's he going to do for somebody to talk to who won't talk back and won't tell? What's he going to do for somebody to be angry with when things go wrong—things that are just machinery and so can't be made to suffer for it? Whom's he going to take it out on then?

What's he going to do for some dumb creature that will always forgive him? For some dumb creature that will be loyal to him at the only times loyalty really counts, which are the many times in every man's life when loyalty isn't deserved? When Mr. Ford has had his way with the "lower animals," what's any man going to do for an animal that knows all about him—and loves him anyhow?

That's what I want to know. I want to know how even Mr. Ford can make a satisfactorily synthetic dog!

Caninely your children's dog,

SIRIUS.

THE WHIPPING POST.

Among the many things we don't understand about that affair at Asheville, N. C., are the Associated Press reports of it. "From 9 to 10 p. m. the night of the crime." Why not from 9 to 10 p. m. the same morning? "Deputies were sent to interview the girl. Two other persons, taken into custody previously, were held on the same technicality." We call that the bluest sort of Puritanic tyranny!

Beast Barracks.

West Point, N. Y., July 22.

This season of the year is known as Beast Barracks at the United States Military Academy. The origin of the term is lost, but the meaning is not hard to arrive at, for the season is devoted to the preliminary education of the new class of cadets—565 of them at this time. The cadet handbook, Bugle Notes, defines a Beast as a new Cadet, and a term so harsh undoubtedly originated back in the days of strenuous physical hazing, when the pressure on the bewildered plebe was much heavier than now.

The new plebes came in July 1, in civvies, to begin a year of discipline and work so exciting that some of them, as always happens, will put by their uniforms, choke back the tragedy of failure and check out of the Military Academy without ever having been recognized by the upper classmen.

Recognition comes at the end of the plebe year, and is given with a bit of ceremony. Just after the graduation parade the corps marches into the central area, the front ranks are given about-face, and the upper classmen extend their hands to the plebes, who then achieve the status of human beings with human feelings.

* * * *

The Beasts are now largely in the hands of upper classmen who are teaching them Squads East, the Anatomy of the Musket and something about the code and traditions of the corps. The lessons also include some impersonal suggestions regarding knife-and-fork etiquette, for West Point cadets are drawn from various surroundings, and it is part of the routine to instruct those who need it, by example and suggestion, in the approved official method of conveying food from the plate to the countenance.

At table throughout his first year the plebe speaks only when an upper classman addresses him or when it is necessary for him to ask for something, such as the butter or the salt. His back must not touch the back of his chair at any time in the plebe year, and he must not lift his eyes from his plate except to face a superior who has spoken to him. For the purposes of table conversation he must memorize several small pages from Bugle Notes, largely nonsense, which he will be called on to recite from time to time at the whim of any upper classman at the board.

For example, an upper classman may sing out, "Mr. Ducrot"—which is a general name applied to plebes—"what is the definition of leather?" To this the plebe answers, usually in a flat, strong voice, "If the fresh skin of an animal, cleaned and divested of all hair, fat and other extraneous matter, be immersed in a solution of tannic acid, a chemical combination ensues; the gelatinous tissue of the skin is converted into a nonputrescible substance, impervious to and insoluble in water; this, sir, is leather."

Or, "How is the cow?" to which the plebe replies, if he has learned his lessons, "Sir, she walks, she talks, she's full of chalk; the lacteal fluid extracted from the female of the bovine species is highly prolific to the nth degree."

Such matter seems hardly necessary in the making of an officer, and it is doubtful that Gen. Pershing or Gen. Grant, at a critical moment in war, ever was able to apply to the crisis the precise rigmarole regarding the cow which walks and talks and is full of chalk. But they say this phase of the course teaches the new cadet right at the start of his career the necessity for concentrating on a book lesson and retaining a mental picture of the text. They are crowded hard with studies, and they must get it the first time around.

Many of the Beasts these years are surprisingly bright at drill, and this is explained by experience in the militia and in school cadet corps. The average, nevertheless, is almost innocent of such knowledge, and the average physique, though necessarily sound and healthy, is rather weedy, judged at a glance. But given a few months of drill and athletics, in their more or less provisional status as Beasts, the young men fill out, change shape and posture and become the picture-cadets of the West Point model.

* * * *

For that reason the uniforms which are issued on the day of arrival are not tailored precisely to the Beasts but issued in sizes off the shelves. If they had been tailored on July 1 their uniforms would not fit them on September 1, when the academic year begins. Consequently, the poor Beast at present is only a rather baggy caricature of the cadet that he will be by the time he goes stepping off with the rest of the corps to the football games in the fall, indistinguishable then from the first classmen except by the stripes on his arm.

The upper classmen are very superior persons now, but some of them—the yearlings, or sophomores—were plebes themselves as recently as June. The new plebes will catch hell from them when they move into camp, a little later, to spends the rest of the season under canvas with the recently emancipated.

Jewish Children Leave For Camp Tomorrow

Another group of Jewish children will leave tomorrow morning for the Jewish Community Center camp at the Chopawamsic site, near Dumfries, Va., Maurice Bisgyer, director of the center, said yesterday. There will be about 80 younsters in the group and they will make the trip by bus. The second contingent of boys is already in camp at the Boys Club camp at the same site.

Because of the unusually large amount of money being received for camp "scholarships" this year, a committee consisting of Miss Mary Edith Coulson, of the Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. W. L. Corbin, a volunteer, and Mrs. Rhoda Jennings, applications secretary of the Community Chest, has been apointed to pass on the status of applicants for "scholarships." The work of the committee also asures a maximum number of children receiving vacations on money available and also prevents duplications. In addition to funds for "scholarships," the Community Chest also devotes a certain amount of money to this purpose.

Trapped by Greed.

While I do not approve of vindictiveness, holding that the fellow who tries to get even is more apt than not to "get it in the neck" himself for the second time, I must admit that when it works it affords ineffable pleasure.

In a contract game I was watching last week the West player had infuriated his opponents and shamed his own partner by his poor sportsmanship. He observed the laws to a T, but was a consistent offender against the spirit and ethics of the game. So when he was beautifully "fixed" on the following hand every one applauded vigorously. His own greed was his undoing.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 club	1 heart	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
2 no trump	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the queen of hearts and when the dummy appeared declarer's spirits sank. The excellent diamond suit would be blocked by his own queen-jack, unless the adverse cards were fortunately placed or the defenders slipped. Of course, he would be glad to present the adversaries with a diamond trick in order to clear the suit, but knew that if East had the diamond king he would not take it at his first opportunity, whereas if West held it (unless it were a singleton or had only one guard) he would simply refuse to cover the queen or jack. And if only two diamond tricks could be collected, obviously the contract was doomed.

Suddenly the declarer thought of a wonderful plan to capitalize on the proved greed of the West player should he hold the diamond king twice guarded! To think was to act. He laid down the diamond queen and simultaneously played a small diamond from the dummy before West had a chance to follow suit. Thus he "innocently" gave West the opportunity to win a trick that he (West) was sure he might never get again. The lure of something for nothing was too strong—West "fell" with a loud bang! Chucking greedily he scooped up the trick with his king, while the declarer and the breath holding kibitzers let out a roar of sheer delight. When the subsequent play showed West that he had traded the declarer four diamond tricks for one it would have been difficult to find a more crestfallen bridge player in the Western Hemisphere. To cap his humiliation his own partner sneered: "That certainly was a clever play of yours, gobbling up that diamond trick! The trouble is, it seems to have given you indigestion!"

Cattle Dealer Hunts Steers in Mountains

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 22.—Roy Reeder, Keedysvile cattle dealer, has bought his last Western steers to fatten. Reeder has been gunning for 11 that turned wild and had bagged but 4 of them until this morning.

Reeder's steers were from the drought-hit West, and he turned them into a field at his farm. They leaped the fences, high enough to hold domestic cattle, and headed for the mountains. Reeder and several employes who have been gunning for the steers this week report them as elusive as deer and they have succeeded in killing but 4.

Appreciation Of Music

By William Lyon Phelps.

Delight In Classics.

I suppose several million boys and girls and men and women, who cannot play any musical instrument and who have not studied the theory of music, wish to appreciate the best music, whether it is played by a solo pianist or violinist, or by a quartet in chamber concerts or by an orchestra of a hundred pieces. And indeed it is enormously important for individuals that they should be able to appreciate good music; for when one reaches this fortunate state of mind, one has a source of rich enjoyment that the world cannot take away.

I myself am not a musician and cannot play any musical instrument; but my delight in listening to an orchestra playing Beethoven and Wagner or to a pianist playing Chopin, my delight, I say, is so real and so exquisite, that I would not lose it for anything. It is a source of immense pleasure.

* * * *

Now here are two books, just published in America, written by Percy A. Scholes, which will be of great help to all who wish to know how to listen to music; how to become lovers of the best music; how to enjoy intelligently first-class music.

Some day I shall reprint in this column Mark Twain's account of the torture and agony he suffered while listening to the opera "Lohengrin," an opera that gives me unalloyed delight. Had Mark Twain been able to devote more time to listening, and more energy to understanding it, his torture would have been changed into joy. It would have been worth the effort.

Yet it is certain that when Mark Twain described the agonies of boredom and misery he suffered listening to Wagner, he had the courage to say what thousands of people think. Yet many of them would think differently with a little time, energy, and thought.

Dr. Percy Scholes was formerly chief music critic of the British Broadcasting Corporation; the American editor of these two books is Dr. Will Earhart, director of music in the public schools of Pittsburgh.

Both these books are published by M. Witmark & Sons, New York. The first is called "Music Appreciation, Its History and Technique." This is a volume of about 400 pages, and is of course not intended for professional musicians, but for the general reader. The second is a small volume of 100 pages. Il is called "The Scholes Music Handbook." It gives definitions and explanations of every musical word, term, or phrase.

Nurseries to Raise Food for Wild Life

Baltimore, July 22.—The Federal Government will establish two nurseries to raise food for wild life in the Resettlement Administration's 44,000-acre tract in Garrett County.

Plans for the nurseries were announced today by E. Lee LeCompte, State game warden. LeCompte said he and F. W. Besley, State forester, had agreed to run the nurseries if the RA were forced to drop work on the Garrett County project.

Establishment of the nurseries and the type of food-bearing plants was decided upon only after a long series of conferences, LeCompte said. Two game technicians from Connecticut were brought down for the study. Others who participated were Richard Hayes, game technician of the Garrett County project; Richard S. Browning, deputy game warden Garrett County, and Joseph A. Minke, Allegany County deputy game warden.

Notification.

Mrs. Landon—Alfred, I think I hear somebody coming up the front steps.

Governor—Are we expecting anybody?

Mrs. Landon—Not that I can remember.

Governor—Well, just let's not answer the doorbell; it can't be anything important.

(The doorbell ringing becomes so violent that Mrs. Landon answers it and calls up to the Governor.)

Mrs. Landon—Alf!

Governor—Yes, dear.

Mrs. Landon—It's the notification man.

Governor—Tell him we don't want any!

* * * *

(Mrs. Landon excuses herself and hurries upstairs to the Governor.)

Mrs. Landon—Alfred, he's very persistent; he's got his foot in the door and says he won't go away until you're notified.

Governor—Notified of what?

Mrs. Landon—He didn't say.

Governor (yawning as the bell rings again—Whatever it is, you take it, honey; it's okay with me.

Mrs. Landon—I told him I'd take it, but he said it was for you personally. What do you think it could be? Have you been doing anything lately that would lead to any sort of notification?

Governor—What do you mean by that?

Mrs. Landon—I mean wherever you've been within the past year you remember everything that happened?

Governor—Of course, I remember everything that happened! What're you hinting at?

Mrs. Landon—Well, there was that Cleveland business . . .

Governor—Cleveland?

Mrs. Landon—Yes, back in June. I think it was. Maybe it's someting about that.

Governor—You don't suppose that leaked out, do you?

Mrs. Landon—You know how things like that get around. I told you you'd hear from it later.

Governor—Just what happened there, anyhow? I can't quite remember. It was something about my being a bearer, wasn't it?

Mrs. Landon—Yes, they named you as a . . . let me think . . . oh, yes, a standard bearer.

* * * *

Governor (looking out of the window as the bell ringing is supplemented by loud cries from below)—Shucks, there's more than one feller; there's a whole pack of them.

Mrs. Landon—But, Alfred, you brought this all on your own head, you know, and you ought to be willing to take the consequences. You did accept the nomination.

Governor—Maybe so, but how was I to know they'd let it go this far? I hoped they'd overlook it. If I could go home and forget it, why couldn't they?

Mrs. Landon—It's little things like that that always turn up to bother a man. They're banging on the door now. You'd better go down and face the music.

Governor (hopelessly and with great resignation)—I guess there's no way out of it now, ma.

D. Leigh Colvin, Dry Candidate, Outlines Views

Arrives Here Unheralded; Reports Progress of His Party.

Unaccompanied by the retinue of political satellites that usually surround nominees for the Presidency of the United States, the man who heads the National Prohibition Party ticket came to the Capital yesterday.

This is introducing, therefore, D. Leigh Colvin, a quiet man from New York City who is convinced that the majority of Americans want prohibition, and that with the Prohibition Party in power a dry law, like the Volstead act, could be enforced for the everlasting benefit of this country.

The Prohibition Party nominated him as its candidate for President at its national convention at Niagara Falls, N. Y., in May. Since then he's been campaigning at the rate of from one to seven speeches a day in ten States from New York to the Texas Panhandle.

Outlines Campaign.

Dr. Colvin—he doesn't like to stress the doctor of philosophy degree Columbia University conferred on him—outlined his campaign and his political views in a talk with one newspaperman and one news photographer yesterday afternoon in the Press Building office of a fellow Prohibitionist, James A. Edgerton, who was the party's vice presidential candidate in 1928.

The nominee was eager to answer the reporter's questions. But the cameraman bothered him, and he confessed to a chronic fear that pictures would catch him "blinking."

But Dr. Colvin isn't a rookie at electioneering. He's been working for the Prohibition Party's cause for years, and in 1920 he was the party's candidate for Vice President.

His Turn Next.

He recalls that campaign with a smile, and sees in it a good omen. His opponents in that race were Calvin Coolidge, the Republican vice presidential nominee, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee for the same office.

Both men have since gone into the White House.

"I think it should be my turn next," said Colvin.

The Prohibition Party is still a minority party, Dr. Colvin knows that—there may even be trouble in getting the ticket on the ballot in some States. But there is progress in the air.

"The people and the newspapers are more friendly now than they have been for years," he declared.

And the reason for that is that folks are seeing the effects of repeal. They are noting the amount of drinking done by women, they are noting the increase in our traffic toll."

Says Drys Didn't Vote.

The 1933 repeal vote was the result of "the most one-sided election in history," declared the nominee. "The drys saw they didn't have a chance, and didn't vote. Why the wets won, even though they got less than one-fourth of the eligible vote.

In Dr. Colvin's opinion the political issue of 1936 is prohibition. However, his party has taken a stand on other questions. It is for world peace. It "recognizes the obligation of the Government to the aged." In all there are "10 or 12 progressive planks, in the Prohibition Party platform.

Dr. Colvin is 56. He is a New Yorker, although he owns a farm in North Dakota and lived there for a while. His wife is national vice president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Their daughter, a graduate student at Columbia University, is secretary of the Youth Temperance Council.

Farmer Killed, Wife Is Injured, By Mail Bomb

Virginian Literally Blown to Pieces by Mysterious Contraption.

Cape Charles, Va., July 22 (AP).—Carey Thomas, 47, prosperous farmer of near Cape Charles, was instantly killed and his wife seriously wounded late today in the explosion of a mysterious package received in their mail.

Mrs. Thomas told officers she and her husband were opening the package, postmarked from Richmond, Va., while seated in a car in front of their home, when the explosion occurred.

Thomas' body was virtually blown to pieces, and the top of the automobile, a sedan, was demolished. A part of the gear lever was found 100 yards away.

Mrs. Thomas, struck in the side by a fragment of the contraption, was taken to the Memorial Hospital at Nassawatox.

She told officers the package, about 4 inches square, bore the name of "S. S. Thomas" on the cover. It was wrapped as any parcel post package and tied with string.

The couple received the package in mail which they picked up at the Cape Charles postoffice en route home from a golf club. They had driven a mile and a half to their home before attempting to open it.

Local postal authorities notified Federal investigators.

Russell Ham Dies; Ex-Aid of Railway

Chesapeake Span Unit Renews PWA Grant Plea

Baltimore, July 22 (AP).—Albert D. Graham, chairman of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Authority, acting on the advice of Senator Millard E. Tydings, wrote Secretary of Interior Ickes today renewing the PWA application for a bridge grant.

The authority asked the PWA for $4,500,000 or 45 per cent of the estimated cost of the bay span.

In renewing the application, Graham wrote to Senator Tydings and said he was "at a loss to understand why an amended application was necessary at this time, as my correspondence and conferences with Secretary Ickes have clearly indicated he is familiar with the application we now have on file with him."

Ickes Transfers 4 PWA Housing Unit Executives

Action Starts Division on Its Final Liquidation; Glavis' Post Filled.

The housing division of Public Works Administration, many times riddled by shake-ups and dying from lack of funds, was set on the path to its final liquidation yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Heading a swift transfer of four PWA executives, Ickes shifted A. R. Clas, housing division director, to the post of chief PWA investigator, recently vacated by the famous Louis R. Glavis, now chief of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee's investigators.

Clas has just completed the work of surveying, setting up and planning the present PWA low-cost housing program from an architectural and social point of view. His place will be taken by Horace A. Gray, director of the PWA inspection division, who will supervise completion of the housing projects under way in 35 cities.

Gholston Succeeds Gray.

Jabez G. Gholston, director of the engineering division and formerly chief engineer of the inspection division, will become head of the latter division, succeeding Gray.

Arthur G. Bulger, assistant engineering director, became chief of the engineering division, and Bradley B. Smith was appointed acting director of the now separate Interior Department division of investigation.

When Congress failed to pass the Wagner housing bill, the housing division immediately became moribund from lack of money for new projects. Little remains to be done except the gradual clean-up of the present outlined work, and the steady reduction in the division's staff of 1,000. It might be revived next year, however.

Two Brides Are Honored At Reception

Justice O'Donoghue's Son and Daughter Wed at Same Ceremony.

Only Families Present at Nuptial Mass Held in St. Thomas.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Two brides cut the wedding cake and two bridal bouquets were thrown yesterday morning at the wedding reception at the home of Justice and Mrs. Daniel W. O'Donoghue following the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eleanor O'Donoghue, to Dr. Stephen William Nealon, son of Dr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Nealon, of Latrobe, Pa., and of their son, Mr. Daniel O'Donoghue, and Miss Polly Foote, daughter of Mrs. John Foote and the late Dr. Foote.

The double wedding took place at 10 o'clock at the Church of St. Thomas, the Apostle. Only members of the family were present for the ceremony, but many out-of-town guests and members of Washington society attended the reception which followed. Miss Eleanor O'Donoghue, on the arm of her father, was the first bride to enter the church, with her attendants, Mrs. Frederick Hamilton, matron of honor; Miss Anne Nealon, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Helen O'Donoghue, her cousin, as bridesmaids.

Miss Foote, escorted by Dr. John Oliver LaGorce, followed with her attendants, Mrs. Walter K. Myers, matron of honor; Miss Evelyn Walker, and Miss Isabel Perry, as bridesmaids.

As the bridal couples took their places at the altar, the brides' attendants were seated in the front pew on the right and those of the bridegrooms on the left.

Mr. Franklin Nealon was best man for his brother and Mr. Paul O'Donoghue was best man for his brother. Mr. Nealon's ushers included Mr. Gervase F. Nealon, Dr. William A. Nealon, jr., and Dr. Bernard J. Walsh. Those for Mr. O'Donoghue were Dr. John O'Donoghue, Mr. Frederick Hamilton, and Mr. Eugene English.

Sister Married First.

The ceremony was performed at a mass and Miss O'Donoghue and Mr. Nealon were the first couple married. They also left the church preceding Mr. O'Donoghue and his bride.

When they arrived at the O'Donoghue residence on California street the brides came out on an upper balcony at the side of the house and from there threw their bouquets. Both were caught by bridesmaids, one by Miss Helen O'Donoghue and the other by Miss Evelyn Walker.

Tables from which the wedding breakfast was served were arranged both in the garden and in the dining room of the house. That in the dining room had the wedding cake as a centerpiece and was decorated with a bowl of white roses and white tapers in silver holders at either end. The brides stood on opposite sides of the table and cut their cake at the same time.

Mrs. Stephen Nealon, mother of one of the bridegrooms, wore a dress of angel skin beige lace made with a surplice neckline and jacket to match, and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses and blue delphinium.

Bride's Mother in Gray.

Mrs. Foote, mother of one of the brides, wore a gray chiffon gown with gray lace sleeves and a black velvet hat, and a corsage of gardenias.

The engagement of Miss Foote and Mr. O'Donoghue was a surprise to their friends. It was announced at a cocktail party given by Mrs. Foote Saturday in honor of Dr. Nealon and Miss O'Donoghue. After toasting the daughter of Justice O'Donoghue and her fiance, Mrs. Foote said: "I wish now to propose a toast to my future son-in-law, Mr. Daniel O'Donoghue."

The two couples left on their wedding trips immediately after the reception, both brides in gray. Mrs. Donoghue wore a frock of gray crepe with a bolero jacket and tailored organdie collar and cuffs. She and Mr. O'Donoghue left for the Homestead, Hot Springs, Va., and will later spend a month on a ranch in Wyoming.

Dr. and Mrs. Nealon left by motor for a Northern trip. She wore a going-away gown of gray crepe trimmed in British tan with accessories of the same shade.

Miss Harcourt Dinner Guest

The Counselor of The Netherlands Legation and Mme. Molekamp entertained at dinner last night in honor of Miss Aletha Harcourt, of London, England, who has been visiting them.

The dinner was held in the garden of the Georgetown home of Mr. and Mme. Molekamp. Guests were seated at individual tables and an orchestra played through the dinner.

Among the guests were the Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Edward Kulikowski, who is sailing August 1 for Europe for a vacation; the First Secretaries of the German Embassy, Herr Herbert Scholz and Herr Ernst Meyer; Miss Florence Harris, Col. and Mrs. Edward Sturdevant, Mr. William Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Detlow Martinson and Mr. J. Forester Davison.

Mrs. Rogers Seeks Books To Aid Needy

Westerns and Mysteries Held Most Suited for Lending Route.

Resettlement Dwellers in South Seldom Read Classics, She Says.

By Dudley Harmon.

Mrs. Higginson Rogers has found a new use for hair-raising mysteries and blood-curdling westerns that nobody reads a second time. She collects them from her friends and distributes them among occupants of rural resettlement homesteads in the South.

Mrs. Rogers recently returned from a three weeks' tour of West Virginia, Tennessee and Pennsylvania in her specially designed "Bookmobile," a half-ton truck painted gray and furnished with shelves for books. The shelves are lined with glass, so that those who borrow volumes may point out those they wish.

The "Bookmobile" is Mrs. Rogers' own idea. Since she started working for the Government, she has traveled frequently among the towns of the coal mining regions of the South, and, impressed by the silent misery of the inhabitants, decided to do something about the situation.

"Pleasure, not uplift, is my motto," said she yesterday. "That's why I want donations of mysteries and thrillers instead of classics and sophisticated fiction. I found, with a few exceptions, these are what the people down there like to read."

Mrs. Rogers had only two requests for classics while on her tour. One came from a pale, high school educated youth—most in that region have never been beyond grammar school—who wanted a copy of "Don Quixote," and the other was a request for "The Merchant of Venice."

Sophisticated reading, however, according to Mrs. Rogers, holds no attraction for them. So far nobody has asked for the works of Michael Arlen, Noel Coward, Ernest Hemingway or others of their type.

Mrs. Rogers made the trip with Miss Nancy Grimes, sister of Mr. Charles Pennebacker Grimes, who formerly resided here. Miss Grimes, who held a position with Rural Resettlement, is at present visiting her brother on Long Island, and will live in New York next year. At present two assistants of Mrs. Rogers are in charge of the "Bookmobile," which collects the volumes it has left among the inhabitants, two weeks after distributing them. There is no financial obligation whatsoever on the part of those who borrow.

Mrs. Rogers and Miss Grimes started out with 350 volumes, but hope that through further contributions they can raise the number to 1,000. The former will leave again September 1 for a second trip in the "Bookmobile."

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Loundes

Had she been far more observant than she was she would have noticed that even so Philip, behaving as if the table was still there, had walked around by the window when making his way to what he called his and Iris' quarters.

Then he turned around, and as she came forward she noticed that his face was working, and that zigzagging across it was that singular grin she had seen there twice before. Then she gave a loud startled cry of fear, for the rug beneath her feet suddenly gave way, and carrying it with her, she fell straight down into a deep well.

Instinctively she threw out her hands and felt for the slimy walls on either side, as she screamed desparingly, "Philip! Philip! Save me——"

As her feet touched water her right hand clutched a stone which jutted out from the side. On that stone she put both her hands and supported herself, remembering as she did so the stories she had heard concerning this horrible oubliette. She was far too frightened and shaken by what she took simply to be a terrifying accident to ask herself how it could have come to pass that the cover, or lid, of the yawning sound hole could have been taken off without the knowledge of Philip and Iris.

AT LAST she heard, as if from infinitely far off, "Can you hear me, Ruth? Are you hurt?" She cried back, "I—I don't think so. But do get Troutbeck to come round as soon as you can; he will help to get me out."

"I can manage without Troutbeck. I'll go and get a rope, or something——"

And then came the sound of two doors banging, the one after the other. Painfully she threw back her head, to see far above her the ceiling of the king's chamber, and then began for the unhappy girl a time of waiting.

Soon she lost count of time and after having found her footing in some 3 feet of water, she waited while the moments seemed like minutes, the minutes like hours, and the hours like days. At intervals she would give a lamentable cry: "Philip! Are you there?" varied by, "Save me! I can't hold out much longer."

But she might have saved her breath, for after Philip Trefane had shouted out his comforting words he had rushed away, closing behind him first one, and then the other door which led in and out of the great hall.

When in the lobby, and hardly knowing what he was doing, he ran the two huge bolts of the front door into their sockets. Then he leaped up the high stone steps of the tower, and took refuge—refuge was the word—in the room which Ruth Starling had left half an hour ago.

Suitcase Hidden.

There stood on the floor a small suitcase, doubtless containing the things she had used last night and this morning. He looked at it considerингly for a moment. Then he opened out wide the lowest drawer of the tallboy opposite the four-post bed. That drawer was just large enough to hold the suitcase, and as he put it in there he told himself that it might be a year before any one would think of opening that drawer.

The windows were both open, and he shut them before he looked searchingly round, afraid of missing anything that might conceivably incriminate him later on.

He had only been in this room once. The day before Ruth Starling had arrived at the castle Iris had made him come up here, rather against his will, and of course he had admired all her handiwork, as she had known he would do.

It struck him that probably no one would be sleeping here again for a long time to come, for modern folk avoid even a comfortable and commodious house where a horrible tragedy has lately taken place.

Conscience can play a man strange tricks. As this man stood there he suddenly heard distinctly Ruth's despairing voice. Was it "Philip, I'm drowning! Save me——?" Yet reason told him it was impossible for him to hear Ruth's cries of fear and pain.

He shivered. Surely she must be dead, drowned in 8 feet of water, by now.

With a hand that shook, he drew down the blinds. In the shadowed room he sat down and took out of his pocket an envelope addressed to himself in what looked like Ruth's handwriting, and read carefully the few lines it contained.

Tuesday Morning.

Dear Philip:

I telephoned early this morning to Lilyford for a quick car, for I want to get to London as soon as possible to see George Dwight, and learn exactly how I stand.

I'll be gone very soon, but I'm just taking a little tour of the caostle before leaving, for I have been so happy here.

Yours ever,
RUTH STARLING.

How he had worked, early this morning, to make that note look what to himself he called "right!" And now he took out of another of his pockets the agreement she had written at his dictation weeks ago, and, comparing the two handwritings, he felt reassured. Besides, no one in England possessed any letters of this American girl. He knew she had always dictated to the hotel stenographer her business letters to Mr. Singleton.

To Be Continued.

Travel Alone With Child To Know Him

Change in Daily Routine Conducive to Real Companionship.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

ONE OF THE BEST ways to make a child's acquaintance is to travel with him alone. To speak of making the acquaintance of a child with whom one has lived year in, year out, for years, seems beside the point. But, oddly enough, it is because one has lived with the child so closely and always under much the same circumstances, that one gradually ceases really to know him.

An occasional change of perspective is necessary, and traveling alone with him—home, friends and family left behind—is an excellent way to get this.

A trip to town or even a day's jaunt will not do. The journey must be at least a couple of days long, and the child must be looked upon and treated as a companion, sharing pleasures and discomforts equally with whichever parent he accompanies.

As far as possible, he should do his part in making plans and assuming responsibility. If he is too little to attend to the baggage or to make overnight arrangements, let him at least take charge of one piece of luggage, or pick out routes on the map. He must feel necessary to the success of the expedition.

After the first few hours, the child will be a very different person from the boy or girl one knew at home. All kinds of new and unexpected traits and characteristics will come out. No doubt he was like this all along, but in the routine of family life his gradual development had been taken for granted. No one had really noticed him around the house except when he was troublesome or naughty.

Mother and father too are different when they get away from the grind of every day. Parent and child turn toward each other aspects which were hidden in the group, and meet new, and often very interesting, people in each other.

CHICKEN, CUCUMBER AND WALNUT MEAT SALAD.

Cook chicken on the morning of day it is to be served. A stewing chicken is suggested. Cut as for fricassee or fried chicken. Place legs, breast and other meaty pieces in pan, cover with water, bring to boil and then simmer until tender. Place other pieces in kettle and simmer until all flavor has been drawn into the liquid. Use this and the stock from the first kettle for preparing soup for luncheon.

Remove meaty pieces, skin, chill and cut in cubes for salad.

For eight servings of chicken, cucumber and walnut meat salad use the following proportions:

Dice 2 cups of cooked chicken and mix with 1 cup diced cucumbers that are cold and crisp. Chill these ingredients after marinating lightly with French dressing.

When ready to serve combine mixture with 1 cup of oil mayonnaise and one-half cup chopped English walnuts. Season to taste with salt and paprika.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Wounds Must Be Watched.

Whenever physicians are remembered by posterity it is usually because their names have become attached to some disease. For example, Robert J. Graves, a scholarly Irish physician, is recalled in Graves' disease, scientifically known as exophthalmic goiter. Sir William Osler has his name attached to a disease of the blood.

Richard Bright, one of the kindliest of British practitioners of a century ago, is memorialized because of his description of a kidney and heart malady—Bright's disease. William H Welch, medical scholar and philosopher, has had his name conferred upon a vicious bacillus, the cause of gas gangrene. He described this organism in 1892, and it has since been known as the Welch bacillus.

Serum Rarely Used.

Because of the greatly increased number of traffic accidents, infection of the issues with Welch bacteria becomes a matter of importance. In fact, it is far more to be dreaded in many respects than the possibility of lockjaw (tetanus) because the use of antitoxin has largely wiped out the aforetime deadly menace of the tetanus bacillus. Furthermore, the use of serum that will neutralize the gas bacillus is not so widespread.

We must remember that every crushed or lacerated wound, especially one that is contaminated with dirt, is a potential site for the infection. The onset is generally accompanied by a high temperature which develops within the first 12 to 24 hours. Pain is intense and increases or decreases as the temperature rises or falls. The patient appears very ill and a decidedly foul odor from the wound may be detected even at a distance of several feet. This is an early and significant sign. The diseased muscle fibers appear dirty, brick red in color, and give forth a peculiar sound when touched. In many cases the infection will spread quickly to adjacent tissues, taking in larger and larger areas.

Postive diagnosis is not difficult either from the appearance of the wound or the finding of the Welch bacilli through microscopic examination. The gas is easily demonstrated by means of X-ray plates, and the progress of the infection may be followed with fair accuracy by the use of daily radiographs. Treatment of the infection should not be delayed until gas forms, as involvement is far greater by that time. The bacteria in question produce so poisonous a toxin that the normal defenses of the body are practically paralyzed. This accounts for the rapid destruction of tissue.

A Typical Case.

The case is reported of a lad, aged 5, who was struck by an automobile resulting in considerable tearing of the tissues of the right leg. On admission to the hospital the usual procedure was followed and tetanus (lockjaw) anti-toxin was administered. No thought was given to the possible presence of the gas bacillus.

Within a few hours, however, the temperature rose to 104 degrees F. and the child complained of excruciating pain in the injured leg. On the following morning the limb was observed to be darker in color and much swollen and the ordor from the wound was very foul. A crackling sound was heard in certain areas whenever the tissues were pressed upon. The presence of the Welch infection was immediately recognized and surgical removal of all the affected tissue was undertaken at once. At the same time, sizable doses of antitoxin were administered. Three days later the temperature had dropped to comfortable level and the child proceeded to complete recovery. It is doubtful if the leg could have been saved had not serum been on hand.

Gas bacillus antitoxin was used fairly often during the World War, and is now available as a preventive measure in extensive wounds likely to be infected. In other words, both tetanus and Welch bacillus antitoxin may be given to the same patient, as they do not interfere with one another.

Save-the-Forests Crusader

Underwood & Underwood.

MARGARET MARCH-MOUNT, forest conservationist, urges mothers to teach their children to protect the Nation's trees from fires and other perils.

Women Allotted New Role In Forest Conservation

Miss Margaret March-Mount Seeks to Enlist 5,000,000 Over Nation to Help Save Natural Resource.

READING of the suffering caused by droughts, dust storms and forest fires, the average woman laments, "If only there was something that could be done."

There is something that can be done—something that every woman can help to do, says Margaret March-Mount, one of Uncle Sam's most ardent save the forest crusaders. Miss March-Mount, a member of the staff of information and education of the United States Forestry Service, is in Washington seeking to mobilize an army of 5,000,000 women throughout the nation to hold the line against forest extinction. In recent years she has worked out of the Government forestry headquarters in Milwaukee, preaching forest conservation through the Northwest.

Many women's organizations, including the General Federation of Women's Clubs, have enlisted in the forest movement. Miss March-Mount hopes to line up many more, to co-ordinate all women's groups into a forestry crusade, and also to awaken individual women to doing their part in the movement.

Five Rules Offered.

Forest saving, like charity begins at home, points out Miss March-Mount. Here are some concrete things, she says the average woman can do.

1. Teach the members of her family never to leave smoldering camp fires or to throw away lighted cigarettes or burning matches in woods. (In Wisconsin it was found that 99 per cent of forest fires were caused by human carelessness).
2. Teach her sons to protect birds rather than kill them. (Birds are the Nation's best foresters, destroying insects that prey upon trees.
3. Promote bird-house building on by her children and her neighbor's children.
4. Promote tree plantings through garden clubs and other groups.
5. Work for legislation to protect forests.

Inaugurated by Women.

"It was women who started the forest conservation movement 30 years ago," said Miss March-Mount, "and it is to them we are looking for help in our present crusade. If they can do nothing else they can educate their children to help preserve what trees we have and to plant more. If we can cut down forest fires, we will have taken our greatest step forward. Right now we are burning down many times more trees then we grow."

Miss March-Mount said the Wisconsin Garden Club had organized children of the State in a five-year tree planting project. The goal is 100,000 trees. Many women's clubs, she said were establishing forests as recreational projects around cities and thus reclaiming idle land. Another project of the women's groups is the tree plantation or memorial forest. The United States Forestry Service, for each $250 received from a club will plant 1,000 pine seedlings as memorial forests to any cause or person designated by the club. These may be planted on forest preserves along roadsides or anywhere else that land is available. Community and school forests from 10 to 40 acres also are being planted by the Government in co-operation with women's and civic groups.

5,000,000 Trees Goal.

"Women can also work for legislation, both State and national, that will protect forests from expolitation and that will provide for the replanting of cut-over areas," said Miss March-Mount. "Any woman who wants to serve her country patriotically can do no better than enlist to help save the forests. The recurrence of drought and floods shows the immedite need for action. Water sinks into forested areas 100 times more quickly than into eroded areas. What we need is to get our idle lands and our idle people together.

With 5,000,000 women enlisted in a forestry project, Miss March-Mount envisions a goal of 500,000,000 new trees in the Nation's parks and on eroded hillsides.

New Orleans Families Drop Greatly in Size

New Orleans, La. (U.P.).—New Orleans families are getting smaller, William Dinwiddie, research expert for the Association of Commerce, reveals.

The statistical figures are 5.3 persons per family in 1918 to 3.8 now.

Rents, surprisingly, have risen despite the decrease in family size due to the fact that there is a shortage of homes in the city.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Asks Advice on Dissuading Girl He Loves From Keeping "Bad Company," Which She Does Occasionally.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been reading your column for some time and I think you give very good advice, so I am sending you my problem to work out. Two years ago I met a girl whom I love very much. But here is the trouble—she will go in bad company every once in a while. I have begged her to stay away from such persons but she pays no heed. She says she is not harmed by their companionship but I cannot believe it. Besides, people have begun to make her the subject of gossip. I love her a great deal and would like her to mend her ways before it is too late. What can I say or do that might influence her to see things my way? Please advise me. Yours very truly, T. W.

* * * *

DEAR T. W.: Your problem is so vaguely stated that it is almost impossible for me to be of help to you in solving it. You say the girl goes "in bad company every once in a while." Just what do you mean by "bad company?" What one person might define as bad company might seem to other beholders to be rather good company; and to still others, lightheaded company, possibly, but not particularly injurious company. And, of course, there are persons so morally vicious that all right-thinking persons would unanimously vote them harmful associates.

* * * *

I would have known better how to advise you if you had been more explicit in your definition of what is wrong with the company this girl keeps. I might have been better able to understand why she goes against the wishes of one who loves her so devotedly as you seem to, if you had told me more about your two selves; given your ages, for instance; your social and educational backgrounds; your respective occupations and interests, and other things that would throw some light on your individual tastes and temperaments.

* * * *

You have not said whether the girl cares for you; nor whether the subject of marriage has been mentioned between you; nor what her parents think of her conduct; nor have you told what arguments you have already used to try to persuade her of the error of her ways. One does not know whether she is headstrong, pseudo-sophisticated and reckless, or simply ignorantly innocent and easily misled. One does not know whether you are a stiff-necked Puritan in your moral philosophy, or whether you are wise, understanding, tolerant and capable of recognizing real danger ahead when you see it.

* * * *

You will simply have to sit yourself down and give time and thought to working out a better picture of your problem than you have presented here, if you expect to receive any real help in solving it. I am willing to help you to the best of my abilities, but I must have more co-operation in the way of authentic and detailed information which only you can give. M. H.

Hint for "Worried."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the benefit of "Worried," your correspondent of July 16, who asked advice on managing her two stepsons, I am going to tell what another woman did who found herself in a similar situation, faced with what amounted to mutiny on the part of stepsons and a stepdaughter.

The first thing she did was to ask her husband's co-operation in the plan she had in mind. After she had outlined her plan and secured his promise to help her see it through, a conference of the whole family was called for a Sunday morning, when it would not interfere with the children's social activities.

* * * *

The father was the first speaker. He told the children of his unhappiness at the loss of their mother, of his worry over their future, of his inability to devote full time to rearing his family when he must provide for them, too. He recounted to them his meeting with, dawning affection for and finally love of the woman who was their stepmother. He explained how necessary she was to his happiness; and that he loved her as much as he did his children. He took the attitude that they were old enough to understand and respect his feelings.

* * * *

Then the stepmother spoke. She told the children of her devotion to their father; and of the grief and sorrow their behavior had caused them both. She spoke of her dreams of loving them, caring for them and helping through the very difficult adolescent age.

Thereafter, each of the children was invited to tell his story. Some of the things brought to light would have amazed an adult not accustomed to dealing with the adolescent boy or girl. But once the ice was broken, it stayed that way. The children realize now that they are dealing with two individuals who have emotions and who are entitled to respect and consideration.

* * * *

I hope you can print this in your excellent column, for I feel it may be of real assistance to "Worried," who certainly needs whatever help can be given her. Sincerely,
A. D. M.

DEAR A. D. M.: Thank you for your letter. I am sure "Worried" will appreciate the kindly thought which prompted you to tell this story of another woman's way of solving the problem which confronts her. Whether or not such diplomatic tactics will prevail in her case is doubtful, but at least she might give them a trial.
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Reduce and Keep Well

OFF WITH those extra pounds this summer! No need to get two dinners, one for you and one for the family, either!

Just see how Mrs. Spratt manages. She plans a good dinner. She dishes up 476 calories of it for herself. Her dinner is well-balanced, appetizing. Then she just plain spoils that thin, hungry Mr. Spratt!

Look what he's getting! Everything Mrs. Spratt has, plus all the butter he wants, nice buttery rolls, walnuts and mayonnaise on his cole-slaw, extra cookies.

A glance at his plate shows you how just a few dabs of high-calory foods run up the calory count. Cream and sugar in coffee, rich salad dressing, thick gravies . . . these are your enemies when you're reducing!

So don't kid yourself about how much you eat. It's so easy to do that unless you have a handy list of foods counted for caloric values.

Better yet, have a list of good menus figured up by calories. Don't go on a freak diet, a starvation diet, or a kid-yourself diet. Don't wreck skin or teeth on a diet lacking in vitamins, minerals and other health essentials.

Don't make it hard for yourself while you melt those bulges. Get our 40-page booklet. Change your weight for beauty's sake.

Two weeks of delicious menus, tasty, interesting, with calories all counted. Plenty of cheerful encouragement from the author to keep you going. She knows. She's reduced—the safe way.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of the booklet.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Container Often Misleading Factor in the Sale of Cosmetics.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

OF COURSE women buy all kinds of cosmetics through the nose and for the containers. That is the chief reason why they need guidance. Some of the prettiest packages contain the least effective products. But if you are a person who loves perfumes I've found one for you that is an elusive, delicate, gentle thing, with the something that you get from a summer breeze. It is not cheap, but it is lasting, and it carries romance with it wherever it goes.

I've always recommended putting perfume not on the clothes, but on the body. The inside of the arm at the elbows is the favorite place of application. The warmth of the flesh releases the fragrance and does it gently, constantly, until it is all gone. If you buy a good perfume this delicate fragrance will stay with you for a long time. By that I mean 24 hours. You couldn't expect more.

Trying out this essence, I told one of the women who was using it with me to put it on her skin at the inside of the elbow. She said the only trouble was that she wanted to keep her nose buried in her arm instead of going to work. That gives you some idea of its allure.

The bottle—well, that's the one thing I am not going to part with until someone breaks it for me. It is rather severely plain, with three rims or rings around it, a clear crystal affair with the rings outlined in silver. Perfect!

Apparel for Beach Turns Feminine After Many Years

Paris (U.P.).—Pajamas are staying in bed this year and for the first time in many years beach clothes look feminine.

The old-fashioned bloomers have come back into style—but they aren't the voluminous folds of alpaca which used to sink or swim back in the early 1900s. Today's beach bloomers are neatly tailored in brightly colored uncrushable linen and they are matched by brassiere tops and smart little tailored jackets. The latter are often finished with square middy collars trimmed with white braid and embroidered with various marine insignias.

Revenues Set 15-Year Mark; Up 221 Million

Income Taxes Account for 40 Per Cent of Federal Income.

By the Associated Press.

A comparison of Treasury records yesterday revealed that Government revenues for the fiscal year just closed were the largest for any year since 1921.

At the same time, a breakdown of receipts for the year showed the income tax trending back toward its once dominant position as the source of most of the Government's income.

Total Federal revenues from all taxation sources were $3,520,000,000 for the fiscal year. Not since 1921, when they totaled $4,595,000,000 have they been higher. For that 15-year period, however, 1935 was second highest, with revenue totaling $3,299,000,000.

1929 Income Tax Peak.

In 1929, income tax receipts provided 79.4 per cent of the Government's revenues. The next year the ratio dropped to 78.5, then to 76.6; in 1932 it fell to 67.7 per cent; in 1933 to 46 per cent and in 1934 it reached a bottom of 30.6 per cent.

Then it started upward, once more. The fiscal year of 1935 saw it rise to 33.5 per cent, and that trend was continued by the figures for the fiscal year just closed which placed the percentage at 40.5.

Two reasons were assigned for the depression years' drop in that percentage. The obvious one of rapidly shrinking incomes, and a second in the fact that to make up for this loss in revenues, numerous excise taxes were imposed, together with repeal and taxes on liquor.

All Type Taxes Higher.

As compared with 1935, all categories of taxation, income, liquor taxes and miscellaneous taxes, showed increases, but the biggest gain was in income taxes. They jumped $322,000,000 from $1,105,000,000 to $1,427,000,000, liquor taxes gained $94,000,000 from $411,000,000 to $505,000,000 and miscellaneous taxes rose $259,000,000 from $1,256,000,000 to $1,505,000,000.

For the fact that 1936 produced a 15-year record in Government receipts, several causes were given, notably the fact that an increasing national income has encountered tax rates at levels seldom approached within that period and that more items and activities are subject to taxation than at any time in those years.

Five Men Are Held In 'Thrill Slaying'

Detroit, July 22 (AP).—Five men charged with the Black Legion "thrill killing" of a colored hod carrier during a drinking party at a lake resort were ordered held today without bail for examination Tuesday on murder and kidnap charges.

The five refused to plead at their arraignment before Recorder's Judge Edward J. Jeffries, contending the case should be in the jurisdiction of Livingston County and not Wayne County (Detroit). The court entered pleas of innocent for them.

The bullet-pierced body of Silas Coleman, 42, was found in a swamp in Livingston County late in May, 1935. But Wayne County Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea said the men would be tried here as the slaying was the culmination of a crime begun in Detroit.

District to Open Classes for Police

All members of the Metropolitan Police Force will attend special training classes to begin next month, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, announced yesterday.

The classes, modeled after the plan followed in Milwaukee for keeping policemen in trim, probably will be held in the auditorium of the Labor Department Building.

Brown said he intends to assemble half his force once a week, and, with the aid of other police officials, give instructions on the latest changes in traffic regulations, new laws and complete interpretation of general orders issued by headquarters.

Building and Loan Laws to Be Studied

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday announced he would order a study to determine if legislation is needed here for the control of building and loan associations.

As present, these associations are under the control of the Federal Comptroller of the Currency.

Interest in the question arose following the recent closing of the Fidelity Building and Loan Association and the arrest of Fred B. Rhodes, its former president.

Commissioner Hazen said that before making any recommendations he would consult C. Clinton James, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Association of Building and Loan Associations.

Imports Exceed June Exports By $7,045,000

Former Totals $192,233,000; Foreign Trade Volume Continues Higher.

By the Associated Press.

Preliminary foreign trade figures for June, issued by the Commerce Department yesterday, said imports totaled $192,233,000 and exceeded exports by $7,045,000.

Exports of unmanufactured cotton fell off from 193,402,000 pounds valued at $23,380,000 in June, 1935, to 168,490,000 pounds valued at $19,707,000 for last month.

Figures for the 1936 6-month period, however, showed an increase in exports, being listed at 1,297,642,000 pounds valued at $154,082,000 compared with 1,180,277,000 pounds valued at $145,592,000 for the first six months of 1935.

Cotton Imports Rise.

Imports of unmanufactured cotton rose from $474,000 in June, 1935, to $966,000 last month and from $3,691,000 in the 1935 six-month period to $6,184,000 in the first six months of this year.

Cotton cloth imports increased sharply from $386,000 in June, 1935, to $1,069,000 last month. The 6-month figures were $3,877,000 and $5,510,000 for 1935 and 1936, respectively.

A trend of foreign trade volume higher than last year's continued in June, the department reported, exports for the month being 9 per cent greater in value than in June, 1935, and imports 23 per cent greater.

Exports and Imports Gain.

The figures, subject to revision, showed that exports gained 13 per cent and imports 17 per cent in value during the first six months of this year, compared with the corresponding 1935 period.

June exports of $185,188,000, compared with $200,666,000 in May and $170,244,000 in June, 1935.

The increase in exports over June, 1935, was said by the department to be due chiefly to increased shipments of tobacco, lumber, machinery, aircraft and iron and steel semimanufactures.

The increase in imports was attributed largely to purchases of sugar, crude rubber, fur skins, whisky and spirits, unmanufactured cotton, cotton cloth, unmanufactured wool and wool manufactures, lumber, nickel and tin.

Battlefield Park Tour Is Concluded

Fredericksburg, Va., July 22 (AP).—Approximately 40 automobiles carried Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the State Commission on Conservation and Development, other State officials and Representatives of various Northern Virginia towns and cities, on the second Skyline Drive-Battlefield Park tour today.

Cars carrying delegations from Warrenton, Leesburg, Culpeper, Gordonsville, Standardsville, Madison, Fredericksburg, Manassas, Orange and Panorama left from their gathering place at Manassas this morning on the 215-mile tour which took them first to Leesburg and then to Warrenton for lunch. Afterwards short stops were made at the various towns along the way. The tour disbanded this evening at Culpeper, where dinner was served.

State police led the tour, which was to draw attention to the aera of the Skyline Drive and the Battlefield Park zone.

Water Pollution Damage Held High

Baltimore, July 22 (AP).—George L. Hall, acting chief engineer of the State Health Department, asserted today that Allegany and Garrett county streams receive a pollution load of 685,000 pounds daily, in acid-laden water from 400 coal mines in the two counties.

He said financial loss caused by the acid solution is undetermined but "must be great."

"According to a report of the United States Army Engineer," he added, "the losses resulting from corrosion from acid mine waste of the metal and concrete portions of navigation dams on the Ohio River, amount to several millions of dollars annually."

Hall, addressing the Maryland Sportmen's Luncheon Club on "A Stream Pollution Problem in Western Maryland," listed the following effects of the acid-water—in addition to endangering water supply sources:

Increased cost of construction and operation of water-treatment plants. Deterioration of pipe lines, culverts and bridges.

Locarno Powers Meet Today; Pessimism Felt

London, July 22 (AP).—Three of the Locarno powers will gather about a conference table tomorrow to discuss the ills of Europe and collective security in an atmosphere, informed quarters said, tinctured with little optimism.

Final preparations for the conversations among Great Britain, France and Belgium were completed tonight, and the gravity of the conference was emphasized by the fact that this will be a preliminary to a five power meeting in the fall.

Fidelity Plan Corp. Continues to Operate

Due to similarity in the names of two institutions, persons doing business with the Fidelity Plan Corporation, 1409 L street northwest, have confused it with the Fidelity Building and Loan Association, which was ordered closed by the Treasury Department last Saturday, it was pointed out yesterday by Louis T. Lohmann, president of the Fidelity Plan Corporation.

The Fidelity Plan Corporation has no connection with the closed loan association and, therefore, remains open for business, Lohmann pointed out.

Anonymous Letters Assail Undertaker

Charges Sent Relatives of Dead Persons; U. S. Seeks Writer.

Mortician Buys Bodies From Doctors, Nurses, Missives Allege.

An anonymous letter writer who has been conducting a three-week campaign apparently aimed at destroying an undertaker's business was being sought both by police and postal inspectors, it was learned yesterday.

Sent to relatives of persons who have died recently, the letters have impugned the professional ethics of the undertaker who took charge of funeral arrangements and have suggested that reductions be made on the bill.

The undertaker who asked police to investigate said he had in his possession more than 50 letters received by relatives of persons he had buried recently.

Persons dealing with other large undertaking establishments also have received the letters, it was said. One undertaker has offered $500 reward for any information leading to identification of the anonymous writer.

Previous Agreement.

Capt. Ira Keck, of the Detective Bureau, and Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass have been assigned to the case, but so far have failed to locate the sender. The letters, typewritten, are so similar in text that it is clear they come from the same source.

They all carry Washington postmarks.

The text of a typical letter follows:

"The shyster undertaker with whom you have recently had dealings, openly boasts that he buys bodies from doctors and nurses and the suckers (meaning you) pay.

"Take a tip from one who knows and deduct at least $35 and maybe $50 from your bill and you will still be paying for more than you got.

"In case I have not made my meaning clear I will go into a little more detail.

"When death occurs the doctor, nurse or hospital attendant very tactfully offers to call a reliable undertaker, who has previously agreed to pay this grafter for every body, and common sense tells you that this unethical undertaker will not pay this out of his profits, so—that is where you get burned up, my friend.

"Sucker, my sympathy."

Another Letter.

Another letter reads:

"The undertaker whom you recently had the misfortune to call received his training from one of our colored undertakers, and it is quite obvious that he learned a lot about unethical practices, but the one I want you to know is this:

"He openely boasts that he buys bodies from doctors and nurses, and hospital attendants—paying them as much as $50, and increasing the amount of your bill that much.

"So, my friend, my tip to you is to deduct that amount from your bill and rest assured that you have paid amply for any service you have received.

"It is indeed a disgraceful situation which exists in this city, where a man of this type holds a monopoly and has pledged himself to run the other undertakers out of business.

"I would not write this if I were not in a position to know what I am talking about."

Although police refused to speculate on a possible motive for the anonymous letters, it was regarded as significant that the bulk of the letters were sent to those dealing with one establishment. Another firm, it was understood, received several similar missives, but this, it was believed, was done to obscure the intent of the sender.

This year's forty-seventh traffic fatality and the second in as many days was recorded yesterday with the death in Freedmen's Hospital of Jessie Davis, colored, 33, of New York.

A Washington man—Carl W. Owens, 23, of 327 Bryant street northwest—was killed instantly when the car in which he was riding crashed into the rear of a parked truck near Leesburg, Va.

The colored woman was injured July 4, when the taxicab in which she was riding with seven other persons collided with a Greyhound bus at New York and New Jersey avenues northwest.

Inquest to Be Held.

George W. Turner, colored, 3300 block Sherman avenue northwest, driver of the taxicab, was questioned by the police yesterday and released in custody of his attorney for an inquest. Howard Bennett, driver of the bus, will come here today from his home in Philadelphia for questioning.

Owens was an employe of the Sun Oil Co. In the car with him was Robert Jackson, 221 H street northwest, who suffered minor injuries. Owens leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Owens, of Roanoke, Va.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury exonerated C. Holden Ourand, 30, of the 3400 block Oliver street northwest, after an inquest into the traffic death of 12-year-old Walker Shrode, 4926 Forty-seventh street northwest.

The boy died in Georgetown Hospital Tuesday after being knocked from his bicycle at Forty-second and Fessenden streets northwest the night before.

Witnesses told the jury the boy, a musician in the Elks Boys Band, and a chum were riding their bicycle without lights and that the Shrode boy ran head-on into the side of Ourand's car.

Child, 4, Injured.

Robert Wright, 4, 1010 Eleventh street northwest, was treated at George Washington Hospital for minor lacerations after he was knocked down by a car while playing at Twelfth and K streets northwest.

Police-Racket Alliance Hinted After Gunplay

Rumors Scouted by Chief Brown; Auto Riders Wound Man Here.

A possible police alliance with operators of the Capital's liquor and numbers rackets last night was brought to the attention of authorities in connection with the shooting of Joseph Edward O'Brien in an apparent underworld flareup early Tuesday morning.

O'Brien, who is 23 years old and lives in the 1000 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest, was shot in both legs by assailants who fired from an automobile near Second street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Rumors that members of the booze and numbers ring have a long-time understanding with persons close to the Police Department have been circulating about headquarters for several days. The alleged agreement was supposed to have given the racketeers a measure of protection from arrest.

Discredit Story.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, and Chief of Detectives Bernard Thompson both discredited stories of an alleged police department connection with the O'Brien shooting and racket operations here.

Brown flatly declined to comment except to say he didn't believe anything approaching graft existed in the department and that if he had the slightest hint of it he would order a thorough investigation immediately.

Thompson also promised an investigation if he found any basis for the allegations.

Rumored on "Inside."

O'Brien, according to the rumors, is supposed to have known of a racket alliance in the police department and to have been shot in an abortive attempt to put him out of the way.

Five men and a woman, arrested Tuesday night by investigators of the shooting, remained in custody last night. Two other men are being sought. Both were said to be minor lords in the Capital's widespread booze and numbers empire.

Those under arrest on open charges were George Frederick Tear, 23, brother of the fiance of the slain Corinna Loring, Richard Tear; Joseph Edward Bond, 28, of the 1200 block of Thirty-fourth street northwest; Harold Joseph Sweeney, 24, of Walter Reed Hospital; James Richards, 20, of 311 New Jersey avenue, and Samuel S. Montgomery, 39, of a downtown hotel.

Pay Dog Tax!

Have you bought Rover his 1937 tag?

Chatham Towers, the city's tax collector, warned Washington dog owners yesterday that they had better pay a visit to his office if they have not already done so.

Dog tags actually expire on June 30, but it is customary to give owners July to renew them. The penalty after that is well known. A man with a net is likely to pounce on Rover and carry him off to the District pound.

D.C. Expected To Appoint Counsel Soon

Filling of Post Awaits Return to Capital of Allen.

Seal and Roberts Most Prominently Mentioned for Job.

The appointment of a Corporation Counsel for the District is expected to be announced shortly after the return late this week of Commissioner George E. Allen. Allen has been in Mississippi, where his sponsor, Senator Pat Harrison, is facing a fight for re-election.

The office of corporation counsel has been vacant since E. Barrett Prettyman resigned nearly five months ago.

The long delay in selecting his successor has never been explained by Allen who has supervision over the corporation counsel's office. It is known Allen has been under considerable pressure from various political figures, and this may be the answer.

Seal, Roberts Groomed.

The two candidates most prominently mentioned for the post are Elwood Seal, now an assistant corporational counsel, and People's Counsel William A. Roberts.

Seal is reported to have the backing of Senators Carter Glass of Virginia and Millard E. Tydings of Maryland with several members of the Virginia delegation in the House.

Roberts has the backing of the two members who guide local legislation through Congress—Senator William H. King of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee.

Keech Also Boomed.

Raymond B. Keech, member of the Public Utilities Committee, also is being boomed for the office.

Another vacancy expected to be filled soon after Commissioner Allen's return is that of District poundmaster.

The number of applicants for this job has astounded city officials. No less than 25 have formally filed applications for it, and many have gone to the trouble to get the support of members of Congress and influential figures in the Roosevelt Administration.

U. S. Sends Expert To Paralysis Area

Dr. P. J. Leake, epidemiologist of the Public Health Service, yesterday was assigned to Alabama, to help fight the wave of infantile paralysis which thus far has claimed more than 15 lives and afflicted more than 235 persons in Alabama and parts of Tennessee.

His assistance was requested by Dr. J. N. Baker, State health officer, in a message to Surgeon General Thomas Parran. He will join Dr. Charles Armstrong of the health service, who already has set up temporary headquarters in Montgomery.

Dr. Leake is expected to arrive in Montgomery today, and go into conference before planning his itinerary.

Last summer Dr. Leake, who has spent 20 years studying and treating infantile paralysis, worked in the campaign to check the disease in North Carolina and Virginia.

The health service reported a "marvelous improvement" in the Alabama outbreak, and added there was little cause for alarm that the epidemic might spread into Mississippi.

Police Round Up Beggars, Tramps

Police of the sixth and eighth precincts last night began a round-up of pandhandlers and tramps in their areas.

As five mendicants were brought into the Eighth Precinct station house, Detective Sergt. E. D. Lambert said they would be questioned about recent robberies in houses where families have locked their doors and gone on vactions.

It is believed, he pointed out, that many of the beggars "spot" likely places to rob during their wanderings. No pandhandlers were arrested in the Sixth Precinct last night, but patrolmen were vigilant.

One-Man Cars Are Assailed By U. S. Labor

N.F.F.E. Committee Again Stresses Opposition of Workers to Move.

Strong opposition to the extension of one-man street car operation here was voiced yesterday by Federal employes.

Declaring one-man cars now in use are "slow transportation," delay traffic and multiply traffic hazards, W. E. Hoffheins, chairman of the public utilities committee of the D. C. Federation of Federal Employes' Unions, reiterated the stand of the local unions of the National Federation of Federal Employes' Unions against trams thus operated.

A resolution condemning efforts to extend the single-man car system here has been presented by Hoffheins to People's Counsel Roberts.

The public utilities committee of the organization now is studying the reaction of Federal employes to rerouting of transportation lines, and soon will make public its findings.

"If the rerouting of the car lines had been accomplished with the same efficiency and expedition," Hoffheins said, "that accompanied the laying of a switch at Fourteenth street and New York avenue, Washington would not find itself in the traffic congestion that has been its experience since the rerouting took place."

D. C. Girl, 13, Finds Way to Hollywood To See Film Actor

Because she wanted to meet William Powell, the motion picture actor, Ruth Grantham, 13, who told officials she was from Washington, made her way alone across the continent, the Associated Press reported from Hollywood, Calif., last night.

She disappeared yesterday from Children's Home in Hollywood, after telling her story to officials. They said she had no money and they were unable to check her address in the District because, they said, she made conflicting statements.

Studio police were detailed to be on the lookout for her.

Drama Unit Planned.

A new drama group wil be organized tomorrow at 7:30 p. m., at McKinley-Langley Community Center under direction of M. Forney Reese. Washington actor. All persons who wish acting experience are invited to attend, it was announced.

600 Orphans Throng to Park For Annual Elks Club Outing

Boys and Girls From Homes in Washington and Nearby Maryland Go to Glen Echo for District Lodge's Twentieth Annual Fete.

About 600 boys and girls from orphanages in Washington and nearby Maryland yesterday paraded into Glen Echo Park, stuffed themselves on sandwiches and pink lemonade, rode the ponies on the merry-go-round, and had a grand time as guests of the Elks Lodge.

It was the annual orphans' outing, started more than 20 years ago by the Washington order. Chairman of yesterday's event was Thomas A. O'Donnell.

As the youngsters from each home arrived in buses, they were met at the amusement park's entrance by the Elks' Boys' Band, and then paraded to picnic tables under the trees where sandwiches, boiled eggs and lemonade were served.

While the children gobbled as much food as their guardians-for-the-day would allow, the Elks' Clown Band made a tour of the groups. About the only way the boys and girls could be persuaded to let up on the pink lemonade was to stick deflated balloons into their mouths. The time required to blow up the bright bits of rubber undoubtedly saved many of the youngsters from a bad case of stomach ache.

Ride Merry-Go-Round.

After the picnic lunch the young guests of the Elks stampeded the merry-go-round and other concessions which were opened to them. Such so-called adult entertainment as the roller coaster, airplane ride, and swimming pool were barred to the orphans. But if they yearned to try those features they gave no sign. Their little heads turned like weather-vanes as it was, trying to keep up with all the things that were going on.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gee and their young son, Bill, jr., who were dressed in wild West costumes, put on a lariat act. Frank Portello, the clown, went through amusing antics which kept the littlest children entranced. And Johnny Reh staged a Punch and Judy show.

Late in the afternoon the boys and girls were herded back to the tables for ice cream, cake and more lemonade. By 5 o'clock even those who had been looking forward to the outing "for a whole year" were ready to go home.

"Better Every Year."

"I've been coming to these things for four years now and they get better every year," declared a 10-year-old girl from the Baptist Home for Children.

The outing was attended by orphans from the following institutions: St. John's Orphanage, Jewish Foster Home, Baptist Home for Children, St. Joseph's Home and School, Washington City Orphan Home, Washington Home for Foundlings, German Orphan Home, St. Vincent's Home and School, Masonic and Eastern Star Home, School Service League of Montgomery County and the Welfare Board of Montgomery County.

St. Elizabeths Patient Dies; 2 Guards Held

Ferguson, Brunner Are Accused in Assault on Inmate.

Charges Nolle Prossed Tuesday but Coroner Orders Arrest.

Two St. Elizabeths Hospital guards, accused May 28 of beating a colored mental patient, were rearrested yesterday after assault charges against them had been nolle prossed in Police Court Tuesday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered the men held for an inquest late yesterday after completing an autopsy on the body of Howard Hawkins, 32, colored patient of the hospital, who died early yesterday.

Charges against the accused guards, John Ferguson, 28, of 3219 Ninth place northeast, and Robert Brunner, 27, of 613 Morton street northwest, were nolle prossed Tuesday by Assistant District Attorney Eugene Carusi.

The men were arraigned in Police Court May 28 and were released on $1,000 bond each. Since that time they had been granted two continuances ending in the nolle prosse Tuesday and the discontinuance of the bonds.

When Carusi nolle prossed the charges the following notation was on the papers:

"Complainant still ill in the hospital and unable to come to court. To be reopened upon his recovery. Defendants now suspended from work at the hospital."

Ferguson and Brunner surrendered to Eleventh Precinct police after a conference with their attorneys. They were locked up and are to be held for an inquest.

In his original complaint, filed with Precinct Detective C. A. Berry, Hawkins said he was having an argument with his wife in Howard Hall at the hospital May 23. He said he was kicked and assaulted by the guards when they tried to put him in his room.

Bon Voyage Party Brings Nude Swim, Swim Brings Jail

It was all good, clean fun for Charles M. Walker, 23, of the 1900 block of H street northwest, who is in the laundry business, but police arrested him and charged him with being intoxicated, just the same.

Walker went down to the Norfolk steamer last night to bid "bon voyage" to a "pal" who was leaving for Virginia Beach on a vacation. Stern patrolmen who had him in custody a couple of hours later said he went to his friend's cabin, and there toasted not wisely but too well to the days of sport ahead at the beach.

Suddenly he realized the boat had left its wharf.

"I'll get off at Alexandria," he said.

At Alexandria, according to police, there were more "nips" from the cup that cheers, and the first thing Walker knew the boat was sailing again.

Walker took off all his clothes and leaped from the vessel in his birthday suit.

"Send my things to me by parcel post, old boy," he called.

Fifty yards from shore he was picked up by the cabin launch Gypsy Waters," in command of Capt. James Doyle, of Alcove Heights, Va. Capt. Doyle tossed Walker some overalls when they moored at the Airport Basin, and called police, whom he told Walker was crazy.

But the police disagreed.

Unusual Bills Are Announced For Next Week

Musical Comedy at Fox and Two Stars at the Earle Head the List.

Two complete entertainments will be offered patrons of Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. On the screen, Jean Harlow will be seen in the title role of "Suzy," supported by Franchot Tone and Cary Grant. The stage portion of the bill will consist of a full-fledged Broadway musical comedy, "Spring Is Here," starring Ernest Truex, supported by Dorothy Scott, Barbara Towne, Madelyn Killeen, June Carr, Ralph Magelson, Alec Courtney, Lew Parker and Chester Fredericks. "Suzy" concerns the adventures of an American showgirl trapped in Paris at the outbreak of the Great War. The action ends in a blaze of sky-fighting that is said to be genuinely sensational. A chorus of 20 Broadway beauties will add color and vivacity to the sprightly movement of "Spring Is Here."

Joe E. Brown will return to the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater tomorrow in "Earthworm Tractors," a new comedy based on the William Hazlitt Upson stories published in the Saturday Evening Post. The supporting cast is headed by Guy Kibbee, Dick Foran, Joseph Crehan and Gene Lockhart, plus two of the studios rising starlets, in the gay persons of June Travis and Carol Hughes. The stage portion of the program will be coheadlined by Maxine Doyle, for three years mistress of ceremonies on the stage to which she now returns as a stellar "single," and Charley Chase, screen star of the Hal Roach comedies, who has not been seen in Washington in person for several years. Other acts will be presented by Alphonse Berg, lightning dress designer, and the Twelve Aristocrats, dancers.

"Parole," Universal's thrilling screen play of prisons, gangsters, parole boards, romance and excitement, will be the major attraction at the RKO-Keith Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The roles of prime romantic interest are played by Henry Hunter and Ann Preston, with Alan Dinehart, Alan Baxter and Grant Mitchell leading the support. Noah Berry, jr., Bernadene Hayes and Cliff Jones are among numerous others who are conspicuously assigned. The evils that result from releasing dangerous criminals from prison prematurely play a strong part in the working out of the plot.

Brian Donlevy, Glenda Farrell, Norman Foster and Helen Wood are cast in the principal roles in "High Tension," a fast-moving and thrilling screen subject, dealing with daredevil, undersea cable workers, announced as chief feature of the bill opening tomorrow at Loew's Columbia Theater. The submarine climax of the picture is said to establish a new record for sustained suspense. A comedy, a single-reel novelty, and a new issue of the pictured news events will round out the entertainment.

Kay Francis will revive the profoundly moving impression she recently made at the Earle in the role of Florence Nightingale, in the Warner Brothers' production of "The White Angel," by resuming her downtown run in that biographical screen play at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow. In this story of the Crimea and the inception of trained nursing as a profession for women, the star is supported by Ian Hunter, Donald Wood, Nigel Bruce, Halliwell Hobbes, Donald Crisp, Henry O'Neill and scores more.

"San Francisco," the sensational Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, starring Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald and featuring Spencer Tracy, will be continued for a third week, beginning tomorrow, as the chief feature of the bill at Loew's Palace Theater. The earthquake and fire scenes comprising the closing reels of the picture are among the most exciting ever filmed.

The double bill combining the horror of Paramount's picturization of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," starring Fredric March, and the grim realism of "The Plow That Broke the Plains," will continue throughout the remainder of the current week at the Little Theater. Beginning Sunday, the major attraction will be the film version of Philip Barry's play of "The Animal Kingdom."

Outstanding players from among Washington's large resident group of capable Thespians will take part in the Shakespeare festival program to be given by the Washington Players, under the direction of Bess Davis Schreiner, in the National Sylvan Theater next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. Condensed versions of "Julius Caesar" and "A Comedy of Errors" will be acted for the first time locally in the open air.

Running smoothly at midsummer's high-geared pace, all of the 50-odd amusement devices afforded by Glen Echo Park, the Capital's nearby free-admission amusement center, daily are attracting crowds of eager pleasure seekers, intent on enjoying the cooling depths of the Crystal Pool, the breezy Spanish Garden Ballroom, the free picnic groves or some other of the park's myriad enjoyments.

Caught Twixt Scylla and Charybdis!

At least, Ernest Truex, famous star of both stage and screen, seems to have got himself into a bit of a dilemma. The predicament arises during the amusing action of "Spring Is Here," the Broadway musical comedy to be presented on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Reading in the customary direction, these principals of the Gene Ford production are June Carr, droll young comedienne; Mr. Truex and Madelyn Killeen. They will be supported by a strong cast and a chorus of beauties imported from New York and way stations.

Nelson B. Bell

About The Showshops

THAT valiant group of hot-weather entrepreneurs known as the Roadside Theater Company has reached that juncture in its season when it habitually converts its tabernacle of melodramatic revivals into a laboratory playhouse, intent upon probing the worth of some untried and unproved dramatic work still in manuscript form.

BELL.

During the first year of its valuable activities as a between-seasons stop-gap for the theater's faithful, the Roadside drew attention to its old, converted shoe-heel factory by producing "Welcome to His Excellency, 'a diplomatic comedy by Douglas Griesemer, a resident playwright, to which Denis E. Connell contributed one of his most facile performances, as an ambassador with a sense of humor, and an excellent supporting company lent an air of professionalism that made the venture a profitable one for those before, as well as behind, the footlights.

Last summer, its first season in the capacious haymow of the now famous "old red barn"—which is neither very red nor very old—out that same old Rockville pike, but not quite so far as the abandoned factory, the "Broadway tryout" was a verbose trifle by the name of "Grand Gesture," which, about midway of its length, misplaced the germ of the idea with which it started out to make quadrangular stage history. The "Grand Gesture" just didn't come off.

So here we are down to now, and practically face to face with next Monday night, when the Roadsiders will take an experimental whirl at this season's unknown, which is said to be an uproariously funny comedy resembling neither of the earlier manuscript plays. It is by Judith and David Bublick and bears the name of "Windmills in Manhattan." In case the significance of the title is not immediately apparent, "Windmills in Manhattan" concerns itself with the advertising game, the sloganizing of big business, etc., etc.

Two exceedingly reassuring circumstances obtrude themselves in any passing contemplation of this lively farce—Judith Bublick, for several years, has been connected with a big New York advertising agency and so should know what she is talking about in her own racket; her husband is an attorney at law who probably has seen to it that all of the libel has been extracted from the gay sallies taken at the various bizarre aspects of marketing large orders of divers commodities to an eager and gullible public.

However that may be, there is no present intention of "reviewing" an unseen play in advance, although it does seem wholly safe to repeat what I have been told by those who have rolled on the floor in uncontrollable paroxysms of laughter at advance readings and early rehearsals, viz., i. e., namely and to wit, that "Windmills in Manhattan" is of the same genre as "June Moon," "Once in a Lifetime," "Three Men on a Horse" and other enlivening charades of like nature.

That ought to be enough to make the third of the Roadsiders' laboratory experiments the best of the lot.

• • • •

It is interesting to note, in this connection, that two of the members of the cast rehearsing for this play, under the direction of Anton Hardt, will have been in all three of the Roadside's "first-time-on-any-stage" productions. They are Virginia Rand and Paul Bradbury Walter. Newcomers to the organization, making their debuts in "Windmills" will be Lois Hutchins, James M. Rawls and John W. Wilson.

• • • •

There has come to the drama desk a two-page, single-spaced typewritten letter expatiating upon the myriad inaccuracies in the historical aspects of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "San Francisco," in which Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, et al, will enter their third week on the Palace screen tomorrow.

No doubt these objections to an authorial inclination to commit occasional anachronisms, by confusing the period of the '49 gold rush with the later era of the quake and fire, are well founded. Perhaps streets have been misnamed in the picture and other deviations from a strict documentary authenticity indulged in, but what of it?

To the best of my knowledge, there has been no claim made by anyone concerned in its production, distribution or exhibition that "San Francisco" is in any sense a historical drama. It is merely a prodigiously effective piece of screen entertainment that happens to present a trite and slightly tawdry bit of theatrical hokum against a background of one of the world's major disasters.

There may not be one grain of truth in the whole 1 hour and 55 minutes of "San Francisco's" unusual length, but it is still exciting and moving entertainment. That is all it started out to be in the first place.

• • • •

The new 1936-37 Motion Picture Almanac, published by Martin Quigley, sponsor of the foremost of the motion picture trade magazines and reference books, comes to hand and rather staggers one's belief in his assimilative powers by presenting 1,348 pages of tabulated and statistical information relating to the cinema and allied interests, arts, advertisers and what have you? I suspect that I am, as usual, indebted to Ernest A. Rovelstad, who shares the Quigley editorial responsibilities with the veteran Terry Ramsaye, for his latest addition to a small reference library of which it forms an invaluable part. I hope to get farther with this one than I did with Hervey Allen's "Anthony Adverse," for instance. Even with the picture coming along, I still have something like 1,000 pages to go on that one. But then, I only started the thing a year ago last Christmas!

• • • •

Tomorrow I hope to able to report on the penultimate rehearsal of "Spring Is Here," at Loew's Fox, the last-minute status of the new name contest for that handsome playhouse and what Maxine Doyle had to say when she stopped by the desk yesterday afternoon to pass the time of day. Order your copy early. (Advt.)

Oh-Say-Can-You-See Note.

That rehearsal business ought to be right up my alley—literally and figuratively. It starts at 8 this morning and 6:30 a. m. tomorrow. I can drop by either one on my way home!

First President Had No English Accent, Is Claim

Film Research Reveals He Spoke Like Roosevelt or Franchot Tone!

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 22.—Garnishing his conclusions with a hatful of six-cylinder words, Carey Wilson, screen writer, said George Washington talked like a combination of President Roosevelt, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and John (Great Lover) Barrymore.

Honorable mention in the Wilson class of "those who talk like Washington" goes to Lewis Stone, Walter Huston and Franchot Tone.

What brought it all up was an argument between Wilson and Novelist Rupert Hughes over whether Washington should have an English accent in "Mr. and Mrs. Washington," a film tipoff on the family life of the father of his country which they are writing. After poking among the records they decided he should not.

"Washington's diction," explained Wilson, "was that of English and colonial gentlemen of the day, but a speech quite unlike the modern, over-emphasized 'drawing room English.' A bath to Washington was a bath, never a 'bawth.' On the other hand his talk wasn't exactly like any going brand of 'U. S.'

"Speech today is much more colloquial than in Revolutionary times, when only the uneducated used local idiom," pursued Wilson. "Hence, ordinary speech of that time would seem pompous and stilted today.

"Modern 'Americanese' is a polyglot resulting from peculiarities bred by the original settlers and perverted by millions of immigrants."

Wilson picks Roosevelt on his Washington team because the President is "a fine speaker, trained in the best traditions of the language as handed down from the time of the American Revolution."

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, July 22.

Margo, after making a screen test for the flicker, "Winterset," stops to tell of a movie boner that she believes is in the picture, "Fury." According to Margo, when Spencer Tracy started out to meet Sylvia Sidney, he had with him the raincoat which Sylvia had sewed. Therefore, Tracy must have had the raincoat with him in jail. Yet in the last closeup of Tracy in jail, he is not wearing the raincoat. Therefore, it doesn't seem logical that Tracy, during the fire and mob hysteria, should stop to get the raincoat. But he must have, for he wears it during later sequences of the flicker.

SYLVIA SYDNEY.

Robert Taylor says that there is a flicker flaw in "Parole," for Henry Hunter tells Alan Dinehart's secretary that he hasn't a telephone.

Then his secretary phones Hunter, and the person in his apartment answers the phone.

• • • •

In the flicker, "The Bride Walks Out," writes Arthur Murray, the dance instructor, Helen Broderick and Ned Sparks go to Robert Young's house to tell Barbara Stanwyck that Gene Raymond is about to sail for South America. Sparks asks Young to lend them one of his high-powered cars to drive to the boat and prevent Raymond from getting on. The four of them get into a taxi, however, and tell the driver to take them to the pier. But when they get out of the car at the pier, it has become the private limousine they asked for.

• • • •

It seems that everyone who sees the flicker, "Public Enemy's Wife," is coming to the defense of Florida. Concerning that picture, Al Reiser writes: "The bandits are being chased by G-men along winding, twisting, hilly highways near Palm Beach. Have driven from Jacksonville to Miami and know that the road is famous for its straight, flat surface and terrain. There is seldom a turn, and you can see for miles down the stretch."

Continuing with "Public Enemy's Wife," Robin Sherman says: "There is one authentic shot of Palm Beach—the first glimpse, taken from West Palm Beach, and showing the hotels across the lake.

And when Margaret Lindsay dances with her playboy fiance, the principal characters are wearing dinner jackets, which is okay. But the extras wear white ties and tails. We never do that in Palm Beach."

• • • •

The fans find movie boners in flickers that I don't even know are being made. Gertrude Collins writes: "In that new thrilling serial, 'Undersea Kingdom'—Chapter One—a picture of Annapolis on parade is flashed on the screen. And you can hear the band blasting forth. Then the band comes into view on the screen, and you still hear the music, which is all right. Except for the fact that the band, as seen on the screen, is not playing.

Clark Gable, in "San Francisco," claims Shirley Katz, is running for supervisor. There is the sequence in which Gable makes his campaign speech. A woman named Dell gets up and says: "The women of San Francisco are for Blackie Norton," which means that they will give him their vote. But the year is 1906, before women were given the right to vote.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

An attempt will be made tomorrow nght by the Federal Bureau of Investigation lodge, American Federation of Government Employes, to enlist the support of the District Federation of the organization in the fight of the lodge to correct grievances in the fingerprint division of the bureau.

The lodge is asking the restoration to duty of seven of its members in the fingerprint division "who have been unjustly separated from the service" and is urging Attorney General Cummings to institute "a thorough, impartial and scientific investigation of the division."

The Federation holds its regular monthly meeting tomorrow at the Hamilton Hotel and the question of giving both moral and financial aid in the situation, which already has been carried to Attorney General Cummings will be presented to the delegates representing the various lodges of the city.

Yesterday Lodge 21 summarized the situation to date in a special bulletin it got out for its members and listed the steps that led to the resignations of seven union members, the disciplining of two others and the reprimand of two more non-union employes of the technical or fingerprint section of the bureau.

The lodge declares that five of its members resigned upon the special request of Director J. Edgar Hoover; two others filed "voluntary resignations under duress" and that two more were placed on 30 days' probation. The other two non-union employes were reprimanded for allged inefficiency, the bulletin states.

It further states that "sweatshop conditions of work and harsh supervision well known in Government circles, make it almost impossible for employes to remain in the F. B. I." and that between January 1 and June 30 of 1936 about 35 of the 150 employes in the fingerprint section have resigned. These people have not been replaced, the special bulletin declares, "and the burden of their work was shifted to those remaining, taking the form of approximately 10,000 hours of uncompensated overtime."

At present employes are working one hour a day overtime without extra pay, the lodge bulletin says, "in spite of Hoover's declaration to the House Committee on Appropriations that it is not fair to the personnel of the fingerprint division to work the hours they have to work."

Hostility to the union by bureau officials is charged "despite the fact that Congress specifically has approved and sanctioned the unionization of Government employes."

A request for an interview with Hoover resulted in one with Assistant Director Tolson, which the executive committee of the lodge termed unsatisfactory and the matter was then taken up with Attorney General Cummings with a request for a hearing. Shortly afterwards the Attorney General left town leaving word that he had read the brief of the committee, had conferred with F. B. I. officials and decided against a hearing.

"The right of our union to function for the protection of its members cannot be questioned," the special bulletin declares. "Even the highest officials of the bureau have ostensibly recognized this right—but in words only. However, their attitudes and actions, which have been definitely opposed to the union, contradict these words.

"Lodge 21 in no way underestimates the strength of the forces against which it launches its protest.

"Since the Bureau of Investigation is part of the Department of Justice, the Attorney General, as head of this department, has full administrative control over the Bureau of Investigation. The promotness and effectiveness with which the Attorney General acts in restoring these men to active duty, and granting a hearing of the case, will demonstrate how far he is willing to support the right of the employes in the Department of Justice to organize and collectively to protect their most elementary rights as American citizens."

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins sailed last night for France, where July 30 she will address the International Association of Business and Professional Women. She will be one of three speakers telling the international group of women what her government is doing to relieve unemployment. The other speakers will represent France and Italy. Her speech is to be broadcast and immediately after the meeting she is leaving for Geneva to look over the American office of the International Labor organization.

There is quite a scramble going on in the Census Bureau for the job of chief statistician. Up until the first of the month that position had been held by Starke M. Grogan, but after a service of 35 years and 9 months he retired. A good part of that time he spent as chief of the statistical division, a position of great importance in a bureau given over to tabulating facts.

For that one job there have been several hundred applications. In the spring a civil service examination was listed for specialist in public finance—that was the job of chief statistician. Nearly 300 people took that examination but as yet the place has not been filled although the examination papers have been marked and the civil service register has been completed. For the present, until the appointment is made from the register, L. A. Carruthers, who has long been the assistant chief, is acting as head of the division. He did not compete for the job.

A couple other resignations from the Census Bureau are scheduled for this month and include James C. Reynolds, a clerk who has a record of more than 19 years; and Allen W. Aldridge, a clerk who has worked for the Government for 35 years and 7 months. Mathew B. Collins, a messenger in the Bureau, also goes on pension after 16 years of service.

In the Patent Office, six new junior examiners have been appointed to fill vacancies.

Another of those lively meetings to discuss the New Deal policies is scheduled for tonight at the All States Hotel, when the Democratic Women's National Council holds its third lecture. We say the meetings are lively because it seems that half of the audience is composed of Government employes and that a good portion of all the listeners are Republicans—that makes the discussion that follows the speech by Mrs. Louise Lazell quite spirited and peppy. This week the topics are WPA, PWA and Resettlement and Mrs. Lazell will explain the aims and accomplishments of those agencies and each of them has sent a representative to be a target for the questions which follow the lecture—Dorothy McKinnon, for Resettlement, Mae Benson, for WPA and Gerald Miller, for PWA.

Ross Batters Way to a Unanimous Decision Over Phil Furr

9,250 Watch as Champ Captures Every Round, Floors D. C. Foe Once

Receipts Are $14,488; Furr Surprises by Going Full Distance Against Welterweight Titlist; Near Knockout in Fourth.

By Bill McCormick.

The gates of golden opportunity swung open to District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr at Griffith Stadium last night—but World Welterweight Champion Barney Ross swung harder to take a unanimous ten-round decision.

The result was somewhat in the nature of an upset as Ross, considered by most authorities the greatest fighter in the ring today, was a 1-to-6 favorite at ring time and Furr was no better than even money to go the distance.

A crowd of 9,256 contributed net gate receipts of $14,488 to witness the outstanding engagement, which was packed with action from bell to bell. The contest was promoted by Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn for the benefit of the Summer Camp Fund sponsored by The Washington Post. The fund, which will be administered by the Allied Council of Social Agencies, will receive one-half the profits of the promotion.

Although the local lad was unable to win a single round from the almost perfect fighting machine which was opposing him, he made many friends by the courageous manner in which he battled back against Ross—and by remaining rightside up against the fighter who has won four of his last five engagements by knockouts.

Furr landed his vaunted right hand several times, but after the bout Ross insisted he had not been hurt at any time during the fight. He gave no indications of being hurt during the progress of the bout.

Furr kissed the canvas briefly in the fourth round as Ross shot home a vicious right to the head, following a murderous two-fisted attack to the noggin.

Furr rose from the knockdown a bit wobbly-legged, but beckoning the little Chicago whirlwind to come in and fight. Barney did, and Furr beat him off courageously even though for a few seconds he seemed destined to drop for the full count.

Drops Furr in Fourth.

Although fighting a well-nigh perfect fight throughout, Ross was cautious when the occasion demanded caution. In almost every round he waited until Furr presented an opening—or he was able to make one. When those openings popped up, Ross tossed not one punch but literally dozens through the holes.

The world champion dropped Furr in one of those furious rallies, in the fourth round. Ross had just had his dignity and tummy injured by two hard left hooks to the body. He retaliated with a sizzling left hook to the head and a smashing right which dumped Phillip to the canvas.

Phil pulled himself out of the resin dust without taking a count and stood on legs slightly rubbery, beckoning Ross to come on in and fight, just as he did when Frankie Petrolle dropped him at the old Riding and Hunt Club. Ross obliged Phillip by tearing in with a two-fisted attack. For a few seconds it seemed Furr must bite the dust for a full count, but he weathered the storm somehow and walked to his corner at the bell under his own steam.

Early in the contest Ross started flicking Phil's nose with a left jab which quickly drew a trickle of blood. As the fight progressed, the trickle grew into a sizable flow

Sarron Retains Title, Beating Manuel

Feather Champ Gets 15-Round Decision in Dallas Battle.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., July 22.—Petey Sarron, little Birmingham jumping jack, retained his National Boxing Association featherweight title here tonight with a clean cut 15-round decision over Baby Manuel, touted Cuban southpaw, in Texas' first titular battle.

It was Sarron's fight for most of the 15 rounds, although Manuel got to him for several hard blows and twice sent the champion sprawling on the canvas. Manuel scored his first knockdown in the first round.

After the first round Sarron took most of the others, until the tenth, when Manuel connected again and once more sent the crown wearer down.

Sarron got a unanimous decision. Manuel was on the canvas only once, in the twelfth round, when he slipped and fell without being hit.

Tonight's victory was the champion's second over Manuel, having outpointed the swarthy portsider in a close fight before he won the title. It also was Sarron's first defense of his newly won laurels which he is required to defend at least once every six months. He took the championship from Freddy Miller in a bout at Washington, D. C. May 11.

Manuel's defeat abruptly ended a long string of victories he had amassed in this State.

Hines Is Beaten In Longwood Net Play

By the Associated Press.

Brooklin, Mass., July 22.—Three Californians, including a 17 and an Lawrenceville, N. J., had little difficulty through today's quarter-finals of the forty-fourth Longwood Bowl tennis tourney, which proved too stiff for the defending champion, Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C.

Hines, ranked ninth nationally, succumbed to 27-year-old Walter Senior, of San Francisco, California's State men's singles champion, 6—2, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

Top-seeded Frankie Parker, of Lawrence ville, N. J., had little difficulty in eliminating Alfred Jarvis, of Tenafly, N. J., Williams College freshman, 6—0, 6—2, 6—2.

Bobby Riggs, of Los Angeles, 18-year-old national clay court titlist, and the unseeded Joe Hunt, 17, also of Los Angeles, also moved into tomorrow's semifinal round.

Riggs, who took the seasoned Arthur Hendrix, of Miami, out of the running in a third-round five-setter yesterday, defeated unseeded Bob Harman, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—1, 11—9. Hunt had less difficulty in ousting Paul Guibord, of Melrose, Mass., 6—2, 6—2, 6—1.

Alice Marble, of Palm Springs, Calif., continued to set the pace in the women's singles and a player outside the seeded group provided today's upset among the women.

Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., one of a great tennis family, won an 8-6, 6-3 victory over Helen Pederson, of Stamford, Conn. Thereby upsetting the seedings.

Miss Bundy fought her battle from the baseline and won from the more experienced Easterner by the soundness of her strokes.

Moorefield Increases Bi-State League Lead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 22.—Moorefield's Midgets tightened their grip on first place in the Bi-State Baseball League by scoring their fourth consecutive victory of the second-half championship race over the Ellerslie Cardinals at Ellerslie, 10 to 9.

Mellott's six-hit pitching featured as the Centerville Reds broke into the win column at the expense of the Cumberland Colts, who dropped a 10-2 decision in the Pennsylvania town.

The Coaldale (Pa.) club stayed right on the heels of Centerville by taking the Celanese A. A.'s first-half champions into camp at Coaldale, 5 to 1.

The Finer Points of Ring Technique as Demonstrated by Barney Ross

Now fighting in earnest, the world welterweight champion ducks under one of Furr's rights and comes up with a stinging left to the heart. He scored heavily with the left during the bout, both to the head and body.

A typical Ross punch—a straight right smash to the face that caught the District champion wide open and sent him sprawling to the canvas midway in the fourth round. Mr. Furr kept his chin well covered after this.

The Fight Round by Round

Furr pawed cautiously with his left as Barney made him miss a series of lefts to the head. Barney shot a long right over Phil's left to the shoulder and Phil retaliated with a left to the head. Furr landed a sizzling long left to the head and the world champion ducked into his body with a left and right.

Ross shot a terrific left and right to the body and caught a sizzling right to the head. Barney landed a terrific left and right and another to the body as they fought furiously in midring. Barney landed a terrific right to the head then shot both fists to the head as Furr looked bewildered. They exchanged lefts to the head at the bell. Ross' round.

ROUND TWO.

Furr fought cautiously with a left as Barney ducked awaiting an opening. Ross snapped Furr's head back with two straight lefts and caught a left in return. Phil landed a hard left to the body making Barney back away. Barney landed three hard straight lefts to the face and then snapped Furr's head back with a right cross.

The District boy landed a hard right to the head in the exchange but it did not seem to bother bobbing Barney. Furr shot both hands to the body but Ross blocked the punches with his elbows and sent Furr spinning with an overhand to the head. Barney shot eight straight lefts to Furr's nose drawing blood then he crossed a right to the head and a left and right to the head which hurt Furr considerably.—Ross' round.

ROUND THREE.

Furr landed a hard right to the body and Ross shoved him away with a series of straight lefts to the face. Furr landed a hard hook to the body. They sparred cautiously in midring as the world champion looked for an opening. In his first burst of aggressiveness Furr ripped both hands to Ross' midsection.

Barney retaliated by poking a flock of lefts in Phillip's bleeding nose. Ross caught Furr on the head with a short right and covered up adroitly as Phillip sought to punish him in the mid-section. Barney rocked Furr with a hard right to the head, Furr tore in shooting both hands to the body and Ross battered him almost at will till the bell. Ross' round.

ROUND FOUR.

They sparred cautiously as Ross waited for an opening. Furr whipped a light left hook to the body, but Barney still bided his time. Barney flicked a series of light lefts to the face then sent Phil's head back with a hard series of lefts to the face.

Furr shot two hard rights to the body but the champion stepped inside of them. Ross landed a hard hook to the head and he floored Furr with a hard right to the chin. Furr jumped up with no count, wobbly-legged and waved Barney to come on in which Ross did. Ross' round.

ROUND FIVE.

Furr landed an overhand right as Ross rolled with it. Once again they sparred cautiously as Barney waited for a spot. Furr bounced back on the break with a left and right to the body. Ross backed away from a long right aimed at the body. Ross still boxed cautiously, flicking Phil's nose with his left as he danced around.

Furr landed a hard right to the head which shook Barney, but not too much. Barney ripped in with a right and left to the head to even matters then rocked Furr with a series of rights and lefts to the head. Ross was bobbing almost to the floor at the bell as Furr tried to get set. Ross' round.

ROUND SIX.

Furr missed a vicious right to the head, as Barney rolled with the blow. Barney once again ducked under Furr's extended left, making Philip look rather foolish. Furr tried to find the elusive champion as Barney danced adroitly around him, waiting for an opening. Furr landed a hard chopping right to the head as Barney ducked, then he ripped three hard rights to the midsection in close.

Ross did not attempt to fight back at the time, but a few seconds later he shot Furr's head back with a right and left. Ross ripped both hands to the midriff in close. Then he bounced back in the same way again. Then again, making Phil miss a vicious right aimed at the head and landing a wicked right to Furr's noggin. Ross' round.

ROUND SEVEN.

Furr shot both hands to the body as they came together in midring. Ross again drew blood from the local lad's nose with his educated left jab. Furr missed a vicious right aimed at the head, then caught a left to the body and right cross to the head. Barney flicked Phil's face with a dazzling series of left jabs.

Ross tied Phil up in a clinch and Dempsey stepped between them. Ross ripped both hands to the head and body and Phil's nose started to bleed furiously. Ross sent Phil back with a hard right to the head and Phil landed a hard right to the body. Ross ripped rights and lefts to the body and Phillip wobbled. They were milling furiously at the bell. Ross' round.

ROUND EIGHT.

Ross landed a sizzling right to the body answering the bell. They exchanged furiously in close quarters, then Barney rocked Phil with a two-fisted attack to the noggin. Ross staggered Phil with a right, left and right to the head, then he bounded back into the body as Furr clinched. Barney missed a left and slipped.

Furr started after him, but thought better of it and let him recover his balance. Furr landed a hard right to the head and they stood toe to toe as Barney beat the local lad off. Barney ripped into the body and drove Phil to the ropes in a terrific exhibition of killer instinct. Phillip was tired at the bell. Ross' round.

ROUND NINE.

Furr tossed a right, which missed, as he tore from his corner. Barney clinched, then Furr landed a hard right to the body. He shook Ross with an overhand right to the head, then another as Ross went on the

Rippy Takes 2 Links Play Matches

District Star Advances to Third Round in National Tourney.

By Dave Herman.

A Staff Correspondent.

Beth Page Course, Farmingdale, L. I., July 22.—Claude Rippy, 23-year-old Washington (D. C.) municipal golf champion, whose spectacular 30 in yesterday's qualifying test is still the talk here, won two matches today with comparative ease to enter the third round of the National Public Links championship.

Definitely proving that he is as good a match as he is a medal player, the lanky, carefree clerk bounced at Ralph Strafaci, Brooklyn hairdresser, and Louis Cyr, a Portland (Oreg.) railroad man, to become the only favorite to survive the day's firing.

Burton Eliminated.

Followed by quite a gallery, Rippy, by a count of 5 and 4, defeated Strafaci, brother of the defending champion, Frankie, who was dethroned this afternoon by a San Francisco cab driver, and Cyr—one of two men with the shortest headline names in the tournament—by 5 and 3.

In other words, the Washington Ripper had to travel only 29 holes to polish off his two adversaries, both excellent golfers, and he conquered 'em with golf of a championship caliber.

Washington's other challenger, 28-year-old Bobby Burton, was eliminated late this evening by Don Soccoli, veteran New Britain, Conn., golfer, a service station owner, one up, in a heart breaking battle, after making a gallant comeback to trim Jim Caspio, of Cleveland, 3 and 2 in the morning.

To Meet Hawaiian.

Co-sharer of the medal at 145 with Jim Molinari, San Francisco radio cop, Rippy was one under par in his victorious march through Strafaci, and was three over in the second round duel with his Oregon rival.

Rippy is in the upper bracket, and looms as a semi finalist. Tomorrow he will encounter one Kammy Lau, 24-year-old Hawaiian champion, a tough golfer, who won both of his matches today by one-up margins.

A victory over Lau, which he is expected to score, will enable the Ripper to meet the winner of the match between Art Owen, of Jacksonville, and John Lucas, of Sharon, Pa.

Favorites Fall.

Favorites fell with monotonous regularity today, but Rippy, with his long-driving game, his crisp iron shots and true putting, successfully

Browns Become First To Beat Yanks 3 in Row

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 22.—The Browns today became the first club to win three straight games over the New York Yankees this year, by coming through with a 6-to-5 victory and reducing the American League lead of "murderers' row" to seven games.

A 13-hit attack, with the aging and ailing "Sunny Jim" Bottomley leading the way with a homer, double and single and Tom Carey punching out the winning run on a single in the last of the ninth, brought the Browns out on top.

Ivy Andrews held the Yanks to ten hits, including homers by Joe DiMaggio and George Selkirk, to chalk up his second victory of the season. Pat Malone, who relieved Bump Hadley in the seventh, was charged with the defeat.

With the second-place Cleveland Indians victorious over Boston today, the Yankee's lead was sliced to the smallest it has been in weeks.

Selkirk and DiMaggio, in addition to their homers, kept the Yankees in the running until the ninth, along with Red Rolfe. They made nine of the ten New York hits, with Selkirk getting four.

Macks Pound Auker, Cut Down Detroit Lead to Triumph.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 22.—Philadelphia overcame a five-run Detroit lead, batted Elden Auker out of the box in the fifth, and defeated Detroit, 7 to 6, today in the third game of the series.

The Athletics' scoring was confined to two innings, the third and the fifth. The victory was the visitors' first in the series, the Tigers having taken both ends of the opening day double-header Tuesday.

Herman Fink was the winning pitcher. He gave up 11 hits and issued six walks, while his team mates collected 13 hits off Auker and Clarence Phillips, who relieved him in the fifth.

All five of the Philadelphia assists were made by Bob Johnson, playing second base.

Kennedy to Face Newsom on Mound

Chicago, July 22.—The Nats and the White Sox will send their respective leading pitchers to the mound tomorrow in an effort to gain the edge in the current three-game series, which now stands at one victory each.

Manager Bucky Harris has nominated the right-handed Buck Newsom, who owns a record of 12 victories and 8 defeats this season, for the assignment. Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, will counter with Vernon Kennedy, who numbers three victories over the Nats among his 12 games won this year against four defeats.

Nats Bow, 3-2 To White Sox in 12th

Kreevich Hits Double To Deprive Whitehill of Triumph.

Whitehead Shuts Out Griffs After Third Inning of Tilt.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Chicago, Il., July 22.—Mr. Mike Kreevich, who had taken only a very inglorious part in the proceedings until the point we are about to mention, waddled to the plate in the twelfth inning this afternoon, deposited a two-base hit against the rightfield fence, and frustrated the gallant attempt of Washington's Mr. Earl Whitehill to win a ball game.

Mr. Whitehill labored long and laboriously against the White Sox, pumping his curve ball through three extra innings before accepting a 3-2 defeat that had begun to loom as inevitable.

It began to loom as inevitable because the Nats were a helpless crew against the pitching of Mr. Johnny Whitehead who actually shut 'em out for nine innings while the White Sox first wiped out a 2-0 lead and then won the ball game.

Whitehead Improves.

The Nats virtually ceased firing against Mr. Whitehead at the end of the third inning by which time they had collected seven of their 12 hits and their only two runs. They didn't get another run off the Chicago righthander who surrendered only five hits in those last nine innings.

Mr. Kreevich was something of a bust until that twelfth inning. He had been at the plate five times, and five times he had failed to reach base. Only one ball had he been able to get out of the infield. But with the arrival of the twelfth, the bow-legged Kreevich redeemed himself in a grand manner.

Bolton Bungles.

Whitehill, who had met a succession of White Sox threats to win the ball game in the last five innings, ran into a single by Rip Radcliff that started the twelfth. It was a line drive that Buddy Lewis could only knock down with his upstretched glove. The conventional sacrifice by Larry Rosenthal pushed Radcliff to second and then it was that Kreevich lashed one of Whitehill's pitches over Carl Reynolds' head against the right-field stands and won the ball game.

Summing up Whitehill's performance, it was tough that he had to lose. He might have won the game, 2 to 1, in regulation innings except for a bunglesome piece of work by Cliff Bolton who hesitated, then failed to reach Hayes' foul pop in the eighth inning. No error was charged to Bolton, possibly because Third Baseman Buddy Lewis scared him away from the ball.

Kress Saves Game.

Thus reprieved, Hayes promptly singled to left, advancing Appling, who singled with two out, to third base, and Manager Jimmy Dykes then tied the ball game at 2 to 2 with another single to left.

Washington pried a run out of Whitehead in the second inning when Travis, Reynolds, and Kress put singles together, and they made it 2 to 0 in the third when Stone singled, Travis doubled, and Reynolds beat out a hit to Appling with two out.

The Sox got one run back in the fifth after Sewell and Whitehead singled, and with Bolton's assistance tied it at 2 to 2 in the eighth. From there on, it was a stirring battle. Chapman doubled with one out in the ninth, but Lewis and Kuhel couldn't bring him home, and Reynolds' single in the tenth was wasted. That was the last Washington hit off Whitehead.

Red Kress saved the game for Whitehill in the ninth after Radcliff looped a double to left with one out. Kress scampered back on the grass toward first for a sensational play on Rosenthal's well-tagged grounder to help Whitehill over that bump, but nothing could be done about that twelfth inning.

Rough Leading.

Cumberland, Md., July 22.—Pounding the pellet at a .533 clip in 30 trips to the plate, John "Lefty" Rougish was the leading hitter of the Midland Indians during the first-half race of the Georges Creek League.

Derringer's Wife Fights Divorce Suit

Tampa, Fla., July 22 (AP).—Five feet 1 inch tall, Mrs. Verna Derringer denied today she was cruel to her 6-foot husband, Pitcher Paul Derringer, of the Cincinnati Reds, who is suing for a divorce, and then asked for one herself on grounds of desertion.

Her first appearance in court was a surprise move in the case which began last December when the ball player, using the name of Philip H. Derringer, brought suit against her, charging extreme cruelty.

Her cross-bill was filed late yesterday after her attorneys were granted the right to amend her answer to Derringer's charges of "violent and ungovernable temper."

She testified Derringer deserted her in March, 1935, and had refused to return to live with her, although she attempted to effect a reconciliation. She said he left her at Sarasota, where she now operates a gift shop.

Brundage Praises Team's Spirit

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

Aboard S. S. Manhattan, En Route to Berlin, July 22.—Taking steps designed to minimize the impression that America's Olympic athletes required an iron disciplinary hand on the voyage to Europe, Avery Brundage took occasion tonight to term the "deportment and spirit of the team, with few exceptions, admirable throughout the trip."

"Such disciplinary action as it was felt essential to take in one case produced gratifying results," the president of the American Olympic committee said.

Brundage refused to divulge details of the incident cited. He asserted it was not desirable to magnify or take advantage of a situation which now was considered closed but emphasized that "the entire team was the best behaved of all those we have taken abroad."

Obey Warnings.

It was well known aboard ship that the members of at least three teams were reprimanded early in the voyage, but warnings sounded then by Brundage proved effective. At that time, Brundage had received reports of late hours, drinking and gambling among some of the athletes.

The gist of Brundage's statement: "At the end of what we consider the most satisfactory Olympic trip ever undertaken, the American Olympic committee desires to give the American sports-following public a report of its stewardship to date and at the same time correct an existing misapprehension as to the conduct and morale of the athletes.

"Serious obstacles were overcome in assembling, equipping and transporting the team to Europe. The committee believes the American people who supported the enterprise have the right to know that the athletes have justified the confidence placed in them.

Spirit Admirable.

"The deportment and spirit of the team, with few exceptions, have been admirable throughout. Such disciplinary action as it was felt essential to take in one case produced gratifying results. The committee feels that in any group so large with personnel decided on such short notice, there was bound to be some difficulty in personal adjustments. There was a problem in dealing with a group of high-strung athletes who had just emerged from the most strenuous tryouts in history.

"However, upon being placed upon their honor, they responded with a high standard of conduct and trained conscientiously.

"The general success of the trip, the committee feels, was due to the best-equipped ship the Olympic team ever has used, fine weather, resulting in a minimum of illness or ailments of any kind, the obvious determination of the athletes to uphold the finest traditions, and finally, the more business-like and efficient organization.

"We know the athletes will meet the world's best at Berlin with the finest sporting spirit. We will have no alibis for not doing our best in every competition.

"Win, lose or draw, we look forward to the opportunity for developing better world understanding in the field of competition."

O'Steen Conquers McDowell, 6-4, 6-2, in Playground Net Finals

Rallies Give Victory to Champion

Ten Games Are Deuced; Vanquished Lacks Telling Punch.

Overcoming almost insurmountable leads of her opponent with heart and backbreaking regularity, 18-year-old Willie O'Steen, bespectacled representative of Virginia avenue, yesterday defeated Lucille McDowell, of Burroughs in straight sets to retain the girls District playground tennis championship she won last year The scores were 6—4, 6—2

The athletic and determined business school student marched through the tournament without so much as losing a single set to stamp herself as the best of a field of 5,000 contenders for the prized crown. In yesterday's finals she repeatedly out-maneuvered Miss McDowell and gradually but steadily exhausted the challenger's store of net lore. Ten of the 18 games played were deuced, but the eventual winner always managed to apply the pressure and display her best brand of tennis at crucial moments.

Figures Tell.

Proof of the champion's confident, steady playing is found in the figures which show that four times during the match Miss McDowell was leading 40—15 or 40—love only to see the Virginia avenue lassie rally behind marvelous forehand stroking to pull out the game.

The first set furnished fireworks aplenty. Willie served first and lost, then retaliated by taking Lucille's service. The next games went to service and the score was tied at 2-all. After Miss O'Steen went ahead, 4-2, Miss McDowell flashed another brief rally and evened the count again at 4-4.

Then came the deciding point of the encounter. Miss McDowell blew 40-5 lead in the ninth game on Willie's service and the latter went on to win, 6-4. She ran her game streak to five by winning the first three in the second set and with such an advantage was able to coast on to victory. Though Miss McDowell deuced more than half the games in this set, she lacked the winning punch.

Play Superb.

Miss O'Steen's court generalship was superb throughout the match. Frequently she pulled Miss McDowell into the center of the court, then rammed beautiful placements into the far corners off both forehand and backhand. Both players went to the net with success but here again the champion was superior, her deadly volleys catching the Burroughs player flat-footed on several crucial occasions.

Two of Miss McDowell's half-volley returns brought the crowd at the Chevy Chase courts to its feet when Willie's drives apparently had her trapped. Miss McDowell put up a dogged fight all the way but was eclipsed by the brilliant Southeast shot-maker.

Miss Willie O'Steen (left), smilingly accepts the congratulations of Miss Lucille McDowell whom she defeated yesterday in the finals of the girls District playground tennis championship. Miss O'Steen retained the laurels she won last year.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Chicago, Ill., July 22.

When this generation of baseball fans is retired to its collective firesides and slippered ease it will probably be telling the young folks about the story of Red Kress, which will go something like this:

Once upon a time there was a ball player named Red Kress, who was the star rookie of, I think, 1928, and the best young ball player to come into the big leagues in several years. He could hit; he could field his shortstop position and for the first half of the season he led all the league's hitters. He was a fine prospect and the St. Louis Browns, who picked him out of high school, were a lucky ball club, but two seasons later he was on the trading block. He wasn't fielding so well and he wasn't hitting so well, either, and people began to find themselves thinking that he was a flash in the pan. But the Chicago White Sox couldn't forget that he had been a great ball player over one full season, and he was still in his early 20's. They traded the Browns a couple of ne'er-do-wells whose names aren't worth mentioning, and took Kress off their hands.

POVICH.

But there was no place for Kress at shortstop on the White Sox and they played him in the outfield. He was a versatile sort of ball player and when he didn't hit enough to warrant keeping him in the outfield, they played him on first base when they needed a first baseman. He was no first baseman, but he did a pretty good job at the position.

He never did hit, though, like he hit in his first season at St. Louis, and the White Sox needed batting strength. A fellow named Zeke Bonura began to pound the ball for the White Sox; won the first base job, and presently Red Kress was warming the bench again.

Washington had a young second baseman named Bob Boken who didn't have a ghost of a chance of landing a regular job with Buddy Myer playing the position and the White Sox began to cast covetous glances at Boken. Washington, needing reserve strength, snapped up a Boken-for-Kress offer.

With Washington, Kress encountered an amazing series of ups-and-downs. After performing as a stop-gap in 1934, Kress thought he had a regular job when Joe Cronin was sold to Boston during the next winter, but no, Lyn Lary came to Washington in that deal and Kress again was relegated to the bench.

Lary flopped as the 1395 Washington shortstop, but the job was not given Kress. Alan Strange was imported from St. Louis and Kress still languished on the bench. Then one day Kress was released to Chattanooga and the same day Buddy Myer was banished from a ball game by the umpires. Kress' release was canceled; he rejoined the team, made four straight hits, and moved to shortstop when Myer's suspension was lifted.

They never got him out of the line-up for the rest of the season. Miraculously he returned to his 1928 form and batted only a point under .300. He was indeed the opportunist.

But Manager Bucky Harris the next spring envisioned the hard-hitting Cecil Travis, who had failed at third base, as an excellent shortstop. To Travis went Kress' job and the red head went back to the bench. A month after the season started, Travis apparently was not the great shortstop that Harris had hoped he would be. Back to Kress went the job and the red head made good again.

In every emergency, Kress got the assignment and in every emergency he was a shining star. For two months he was the sparkplug of the Nats at shortstop. Then, with both Buddy Myer and Ossie Bluege ailing, Harris was forced to transfer Kress to second base and recall Travis to shortstop.

That was a week ago and at this point this department must digress from the story as it will be told in the future, because I don't know what the future holds. But I do know that Kress at this writing is down again in his valiant battle to stay in the regular line-up.

For the past week, Travis has been playing the shortstop position as if he were bred for the job. And Kress will not be able to hold the second base job once Buddy Myer or Bluege recover their health.

The red head who capitalized so frequently on the misfortunes of others, now will soon find himself again bereft of a regular job, because another fellow named Cecil Travis has stolen his thunder. Almost magically Travis has blossomed as the dream shortstop that Harris envisioned him to be last spring. It's a fact.

Nazi Welcome Hangs Fire; Team Not on Train

Berlin, July 22 (A.P.).—There was one drop of gall in the tide of Olympic joy today.

A German reception committee, loaded with manuscripts of welcoming speeches, met a train on which the Chinese team was to have arrived. The committee, however, had to thrust the speeches back in its pockets and the brass band had to return without playing a note.

The Chinese team had missed the train at Venice.

Cochrane Will Assist In Flag Ceremonies

Detroit, July 22 (A.P.).—Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers, remained in Henry Ford Hospital for observation today, but Walter O. Briggs, owner of the club, said Cochrane would be at Navin Field Friday for the raising of the American League and world championship flags the Tigers won last year.

It was not certain when the doctors would complete their exhaustive tests.

Cavalry Team Scores, 11 to 9 In Series

War Department Polo Four Bows; Virginia Team Loses to Marines.

Overcoming a five-goal handicap, the Third Cavalry Yellows, led by Capt. Galloway, defeated the War Department Whites, 11-9, in the first game of a double-header yesterday at the West Potomac polo field. The Quantico Marines downed the Fauquer-Loudon four, 4-5, in the second game.

The seven goals of Capt. Galloway more than sufficed to nullify the edge of the losers, who threatened only in the fourth, when Capt. E. N. Harmony dropped a long one between the posts, to even the score at 6-6. Harmony, despite a pulled muscle in his groin, suffered in the first chukker, scored three goals to make the nearest approach to Galloway's record of seven.

Needing only one of their two-goal start on the Fauquier-Loudoun team, the Quantico Marines won, 4-3. The game was scoreless until the third chukker when Kirkpatrick, of the civilians, connected in the first of his three scoring shots. ing shots.

The pony of Capt. Kimes, of the Marines, was responsible for their first score, catching the ball on a forefoot and driving it between the markers. In the last chukker, when Kirkpatrick, living up to his three-goal rating, evened the score at 3-3, Lieut. C. A. Roberts, in a thrilling scramble around the Loudoun goal drove the ball across to win for the Leathernecks.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Oliveri Is Upset In Potomac Golf Play

Jim Gipe's Barrage of Pars and Birdies Too Much for Medalist.

Andy Oliveri, medalist and ranking favorite in East Potomac's midsummer tourney, was the upset victim yesterday of Jim Gipe, little known public links golfer, bowing, 3 and 2, to a barrage of pars and birdies that enabled Gipe to tour the downtown layout in 68 strokes, four under fours. Oliveri's 70, one over par, could not match the hot round of Gipe.

The winner will meet Bill Jackson in the feature match of the semifinals today, Jackson upsetting Eddie Lightbrown, 3 and 2. Merrill and Bolger will comprise the other semifinal match. Merrill was forced 20 holes to defeat Harold Bowers, another favorite, in the longest match of the day.

Rippy Gains Third Round in Tourney

and convincingly fought off his rivals' challenge.

First of the big shots to fall was Charlie Ferrera, of San Francisco, twice former champion—Rippy's playing companion in the qualifying round. Ferrera lost to a Sharon, Pa., steel worker, Vash Hromyak, 4 and 3, in a violent upset.

Molinari bowed to Charlie Amandoles, of Staten Island, 2 and 1, and Karl Kaufman, the little Pittsburgh man, only golfer to win the title three times in a row, passed out of the picture on the twentieth hole this morning at the hands of Bruno Pardee, an unknown from New Haven.

Burton a Surprise.

Washington's Burton provided a surprise by licking Jim Caspio, of Cleveland, but the biggest surprise of all was the defeat of curly haired Frankie Strafaci, youngest National Municipal champion in history.

Strafaci's conquerer, Studinger, just caught the champion off his game, and eliminated him one up. Studinger, once two up on Wiffy Cox's pet protege from Dyker Beach, gained his margin of victory by winning the seventeenth with a par three when Fankie's putt from eight feet rimmed the cup. In the morning Strafaci was one under par in defeating the Portland champion, Tab Boyer.

Rippy has a healthy following around Beth Page, and is playing the best golf of anyone in this championship. In three trips over the blue course the Washington Harding Cup captain has been four under par.

The boys just worry about that 30 he shot on the outgoing side. Ralph Strafaci, believed to be a better golfer than his brother, was smoked out on the fourteenth green with a birdie 4. Rippy turned in 35 against Strafaci, thanks to birdies on the sixth and ninth. Strafaci won only three holes—the first, tenth where he rapped in a 15-footer for a deuce, and the twelfth where Rippy's tee shot found the woods.

At the turn Rippy was 4-up, and from that point on he coasted home comfortably. Rippy did not 3-putt a green against Strafaci, while the Brooklyn hair dresser 3-putted four of 'em.

Defeat Hard.

The defeat was hard for Ralph to swallow inasmuch as yesterday he wagered ten bucks that Rippy would shoot a 69 in the qualifying round, and lost. Rippy got a 70.

Cyr, a swaggering bragger, who in the locker room told the boys, "I'm going to cut Rippy to pieces this afternoon," never had a chance once the District star started splitting the pins with his iron.

Rippy shot the last six holes in even par against Cyr.

Three at the seventh, Burton put on a burst of speed to catch Caspio, his morning opponent, at the tenth, and win the twelfth, fifteenth and sixteenth with slashing golf to capture the match.

In the afternoon Burton was three down at the seventh to the veteran Soccoli and staged another great rally to catch his rival at the eleventh.

Bobby went one up at the twelfth with a par four, but missed short putts on the thirteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth to go down. Burton took the seventeenth with a fine par, and his best on the home hole was a par four, a half, and Soccoli triumphed. Cards:

Arch and Jack Having Words

Arch McDonald, radio sports announcer, having a few words with Jack Dempsey, but all for the Ross-Furr fight, which in turn helped supply funds for the operation of a fresh-air camp for underprivileged children. The result was a draw.

Barney Ross Gets Verdict Over Furr

and Phillip was a slightly gruesome sight toward the finish.

Ross' technique consisted almost entirely of boxing cautiously until he spotted a crack in Phil's armor, then firing a barrage through the chink. He usually started those barrages with a left hook, but, on occasion, he began the operations with a right to the noggin or midriff.

Furr landed his vaunted right hand, which a few thought would level Barney, solidly only a few times during the contest. When he did park it solidly it seemed to have no visible effect on the rugged little Jewish lad.

At close quarters, Phil seemed almost the equal of Barney—sometimes. Those times came when he got off first and ripped both mittens to the midsection, several times forcing Barney to clinch his way out of the attack.

Many thought Phillip employed the wrong tactics against the world titleholder when he waited at the beginning of each round for Ross to take the lead instead of trying to set the pace himself. On the few occasions when he did take the play away from Ross, Phillip seemed to do much better than he did throughout most of the fight.

Jack Dempsey, whose presence in the ring as referee probably accounted for quite a few of the cash customers, worked the bout very efficiently and quietly.

Lew Raymond, of Baltimore, and Ritchie Mack, who gave Ross his best workouts in training camp, went six rounds to a draw in a rough and tumble preliminary. Raymond frequently belted the Indianapolis lad around, but Ritchie bounced back often enough to even matters in the opinion of the official deciders.

Killer Lamar, Washington's Joe Louis, scored a quick knockout over one Vernon Cox, of Baltimore, in an emergency bout scheduled for four rounds. The Killer flattened Cox for keeps with a left to the chin which draped him in the ropes, then on the floor.

The referee finished counting after one minute and five seconds, but it was minutes before they could get Vernon revived enough to be carried from the ring.

Carter Scores K. O.

Jackie Carter, heavy-hitting Oakland (Calif.) featherweight, scored the second knockout of the night in the third round of a scheduled six rounder against Bill Temes, of Silver Springs, Fla. Carter had things pretty well under control from the opening bell.

In the third round he straightened Temes with a sizzling right. Bill stood as stiff as a poker for a few seconds and Carter merely reached out and pushed him over, ending the bout after two minutes of the round.

Preliminaries.

Frank Tymosko, former University of Richmond fistic star who went to the finals of this year's national A. A. U. tournament, scored a third-round knockout over John Fortuna, of Baltimore, in an opener scheduled for four rounds.

Tymosko was on the floor for no count early in the bout, but he floored Fortuna in the second with a terrific right to the head. The bell saved Fortuna at that point, but it wasn't ready to ring the next time Tymosko landed—this time with a left to the chin—and poor Johnny was counted out after only 31 seconds of the round.

Dominick Mancini, of Pittsburgh, won a unanimous decision from Frankie Litt, a Newark, N. J., lightweight, in a six-round semifinal which followed the main event.

Fredericksburg Wins, Goes to 2d

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 22.—Fredericksburg clinched second place in the Valley League here today with a 1-to-0 decision over Culpeper. The game turned into a pitchers' duel between Bill Henry, of Fredericksburg, and Fred Hudson, of Culpeper. Each allowed five safeties.

Fredericksburg made its run in the fifth inning after Johnson earned a walk, Christy singled to send Johnson to third and Fenlon's sacrifice scored Johnson.

Ross-Furr Fight Round by Round defensive. Furr shook the champion with a hard right to the head, then Barney ripped into Furr's midsection.

Ross rolled with a hard right to the head, then jabbed Phil off. Phil landed a hard right to the body then a right, goading Barney into a furious flurry to the head and body which almost made Phil wilt. Ross landed both hands to the head and body too many times to count, and Phil clinched the buzz-saw, Ross' round.

ROUND TEN.

They sparred cautiously, Phil apparently afraid to open up and Barney waiting for a spot—or to be shaken into action. Furr ripped a hard left to the body and they exchanged lefts to the head. Furr shot both hands to the body at close quarters and the champion didn't like it. Phil back-pedaled furiously as Ross sought to catch up with him and administer a flurry. Ross ripped both hands to the midriff and Phil clinched. Ross mauled Phil at close quarters as Phil seemed to want to rest. They stood toe to toe on the ropes, swapping punches furiously with honors fairly even. Ross' round.

Time Supply Wins $25,000 Suffolk Purse; Gov. Sholtz Second

Stand Pat 3d, Discovery Runs Out

Workman Rides Winner, Pays $9.80; 45,000 Bet $105,327.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 22.—Time Supply, the rich bay 5-year-old star of Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's stable, came into his own today by racing easily to a three-length victory in the first renewal of the $25,000 added Massachusetts handicap before 45,000 at Suffolk Downs.

Ridden by the veteran Sonny Workman, who claimed he felt confident from the very start of the mile and an eighth race, the son of Time Maker got off well, stayed off the early pace and made his successful bid rounding the last turn, where he passed good gamble, the feminine half of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's entry, which led to that point.

The Carreaud Star, second to top row in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, where he came up to eleventh place, was clocked in 1:49 4-5, two fifths of a second off the track record, as he crossed under the wire with P. A Shaw's 60-to-1 Gov. Sholtz three lengths behind him. The place horse was just as far ahead of E. F. Seagram's Stand Pat.

The Vanderbilt entry, which included Discovery, idol of New England turf followers, was the even money favorite. Although the young New York millionaire sportsman declared for Discovery, which finished a poor eighth in the 11-horse field, it was the Chance Play filly that raced for him. She wilted so badly during the dash to the wire that she ended up in fifth place, a length behind Leon Carter's Black Gift, which gained the smallest share of the rich purse by trailing Stand Pat by a length.

In this event's inaugural last year, Time Supply finished fourth, behind Top Row, Whopper and Discovery. He closed at 7-2 today, the second choice, as the huge crowd poured $105,327 through the parimutuel windows to break the track's single race betting mark, and paid $9.80, $5.20 and $4.20 for win, place and show.

Gov. Sholtz, whose previous claim to fame was placing second to Discovery, 15 lengths back, in a minor stake event here last year, was third going to the final turn and had no trouble pulling into the plate spot. He rewarded his few supporters with $49 and $15 for place and show. Stand Pat, which closed at 8-1, paid $5 for show.

W. M. Jeffords' firethorn, the third choice at 5 to 1, managed to save seventh place from Discovery by a length after being bumped twice by John F. Clark's Clang, which finished sixth. J. W. Y. Martin's Dark Hope, the Belair stud Vicaress and Walter O'Hara's Howard trailed the field.

The victory, worth $23,500 to Time Supply's owner, was his fourth in his eight starts this season and boosted his 1936 earnings to $48,060. Gov. Sholtz' share of the purse was $5,000, Stand Pat's third share was $2,500 and Black Gift's owner received $1,500.

The total wagering for the eight-race card was $707,994, the second largest "handle" in the year-old track's history. The high wagering mark, set last year, was $721,526.

TIME SUPPLY, away fast, was taken in hand when GOOD GAMBLE went out to make the running, went to the front nearing the far turn, drawing out steadily in the last quarter to the wire. GOV. SHOLTZ trailed his field into the backstretch, moved his way up steadily thereafter while holding to a position on the outside and closed willingly. STAND PAT, under steadying restraint while following the pace, made his effort nearing the stretch, moved up briefly though unable to improve his position during the last three-sixteenths. BLACK GIFT, restrained early, moved up on the outside and closed with good energy. GOOD GAMBLE displayed good speed in pacemaking, faltering after nearing the far turn. CLANG, unruly at the post, was hustled into contention and faltered after going five furlongs. FIRETHORN was bothered at the start when CLANG broke into him and Richards was forced to take up. He was unable to enter into contention. DISCOVERY was away fast and laying third going to the first turn when VICARESS bore over. Fallon had to take back and hemmed on the inside would not extend himself when gaining clear sailing. VICARESS stopped after showing brief early speed.

SURE HOUR displayed good speed, made a game bid to go along with the winner only to falter in the last three-sixteenths. PALATINE moved up steadily down the backstretch, gained command at the half mile ground, drew clear and was never threatened. THATCH worked his way up steadily and came with good energy through the stretch run. BLACK RIBBON, restrained close up, made a game bid to reach the leader nearing the stretch and weakened slightly in the closing sixteenth. TEDDY CARL made up some ground, though never a threat to the leader. NEWGRO had early speed, faltering after going three furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG OF WAR, $17.40, $7.20, $5.40; JUST REMEMBER, $13.20, $7.20; RIGHT RANK, $6.80.

FLAG OF WAR took command in the run to the first turn, drew away into a long lead and was being taken in hand at the end. JUST REMEMBER, badly outrun for the first five furlongs, moved up gradually thereafter and closed with good energy. RIGHT RANK, a trailer until leaving the backstretch, closed considerable ground in the last five-sixteenths. GOODY GOODY, well placed, was unable to reach the leaders when called upon.

Giants Wallop Cards, 8 to 2, Gain 3rd

Three Home Runs Made; Earnshaw Pounded, Gabler Is Victor.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 22.—The revived Giants shot into third place in the National League today by clubbing the slipping St. Louis Cardinals, 8 to 2, with a home-run barrage against old George Earnshaw.

The defeat, second straight at the hands of the Giants, sank the Cardinals to three full games back of the league-leading Chicago Cubs, who won over Brooklyn today.

The setback was administered by young Gabby Gabler, who held the Cards to ten hits in his first start of the season.

Mell Ott's nineteenth homer, Gus Mancuso's seventh and Hank Lieber's fifth featured the Giant attack and enabled them to win, although outhit, 10 to 8.

Buying Flurry Rockets Corn To New Peaks

Advances 3⅜ Cents a Bushel to Record for Season.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 22.—In a buying stampede late today, corn smashed the season's high price record for July and September contracts, the market skyrocketing 3⅜ cents a bushel. Special Government forecasts that a new wave of heat would spread in the corn belt tomorrow, with temperatures up to 105 degrees, led to sudden rushes to purchase corn futures on a big scale.

Late soaring of corn values followed a period of transient weakness caused by heavy speculative selling of wheat that temporarily tumbled wheat and corn both down more than 2 cents.

Corn closed strong at nearly the day's top point 1 cent to 3⅛ cents above yesterday's finish, July, 94¾; September, 90⅝ to 91; December, 82⅝ to 82⅞; wheat, ⅛ to ¾ up; July, 104¾; September, 104 to 104⅛; December, 104⅝ to 104⅞; oats, at ¼ decline to ½ advance; September, 37¼ to 37⅜, and rye showing ½ to 1 cent bulge; September, 71½. In provisions, the result varied from 7 cents setback to an equal gain.

Steel Demand Assures High Summer Rate

Current Production Is Estimated by Iron Age at 71%.

New York, July 22.—"A strong contra-seasonal demand for nearly all products, coupled with the greater firmness in prices than has been in evidence since the period of the NRA code, gives the steel industry assurance of the most satisfactory midsummer operations in years," says Iron Age in its weekly summary today, and adds:

"While the current high rate of production, which this week the Iron Age estimates at 71 per cent, is reducing the heavy backlogs that were partly built up during June, the well-sustained July demand is raising high hopes that August output will fall only moderately below that of this month. Purchases by automobile manufacturers for 1937 models are counted upon next month to take up some of the slack that will result from completion of orders that were booked prior to the July 1 price advance.

Advance in Week.

"The increase of two percentage points in the steel ingot rate this week is accounted for partly by resumption of production at the Portsmouth, Ohio, works of the Wheeling Steel Corporation, which was affected by labor troubles, and the starting up of the National Tube Co. plant at Lorain, Ohio, after a short period for vacations and repairs. Some individual units of the industry are operating at well over 90 per cent.

"A striking feature of the present steel situation is the pressure that is being brought to bear on mills to speed up deliveries, which applies even on steel bought at lower prices in June with the understanding that shipments would be made at the convenience of the mills. The insistence upon quicker shipments and the willingness of buyers to place new tonnage without quibbling as to price convinces the steel trade that nearly all of the current steel output is going into immediate consumption, while the widespread character of the buying indicates that general business possibly has proceeded farther in the recovery cycle than had been generally believed."

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Move Irregularly Lower in Less Active Trading; Wheat Advances.

New York, July 22.—More caution developed in nfiancial markets. On a somewhat lessened turnover the stock trading brought mild losses for the majority at the close, after a good opening. Government bonds also turned weak, but commodities held their ground. September wheat closed half a cent higher at 104 cents a bushel.

The most buoyant stock group was the mail-order section. Speculators have concluded, after reading the remarks of the mail-order executives, that they have been too bearish on drought reports. Best prices for the group were fetched in the final hour, when other parts of the stock crowd were at their poorest. Gains of 1 to 3 points were made by Chicago Mail Order, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck (a new high), and Spiegel May Stern.

Motor shares suffered from profit-taking. After selling above 120, Chrysler dropped a little. General Motors touched its best price of the year, but couldn't hold. Auburn was run up 2 or 3 points. Rail shares worked lower, but the decline was moderate. Norfolk lost 5 points and sold at a price more than 25 points under the best of a week ago. Great Northern was firm, as were Louisville and Coast Line.

Utilities were irregular. Edison backed and filled. Commonwealth drew attention with its opening block of 37,200 shares, a quarter higher. Telephone was down a point or so. Steels were inclined to drift lower. Building stocks were ready.

Oils in Demand.

Metal shares lost ground, but some of the backward numbers came forward. Chemicals gave a mixed performance. Farm implements failed to share in the buoyancy of the mail orders. They dropped 1 to 2 points. Most of the oils rose a little on increased volume. Socony was a favorite. Standard felt profit-taking.

Odds and ends included a jump of 5 points to the best price since 1929 by Goodrich preferred on the proposed recapitalization plan. Owens Glass tumbled half a dozen points in a thin market. Coa-Colo proceeded to a new high price level.

Midweek trade news was punctuated by the Government's report on foreign trade for June. After an interruption in May of a three months' run of import excess over export, the June figures show that once more, because of a sharp drop in exports, amounting to 8 per cent, and a slight rise in imports, the country returned to an unfavorable trade balance. In only two months this year—January and May—have our exports exceeded our imports, and including silver as a merchandise item, our foreign trade has run against us continually for two years.

The Import excess, excluding silver, was $7,000,000 in May, and silver net imports were nearly $24,000,000. For the six months, imports have exceeded exports by $10,000,000, and with silver included the run outward has been $126,000,000, a fairly fancy item for this country on the outgoing side. Meanwhile gold net imports for the six months have run to $510,000,000, clearly not because of our unfavorable trade balance, but rather because of our undervalued dollar and the flight of foreign currencies from the fear of devaluation at home.

Exports and Imports.

While our exports last month dropped, imports kept up, largely because of the heavy importations of foreign foodstuffs, items of incoming trade which promise to increase in the next few months. For that we have to thank our economic planners and, to a lesser extent, the drought. Some of the decline in exports last month is accounted for by the decline in cotton shipments, also in part the product of the rise in price that followed reduced acreage and, the stronger market with the uplift in consumption here on removal of the processing tax.

Midweek steel trade reviews took a hopeful stand on the outlook. The Iron Age found a strong contra seasonal demand for steel. Railroad freight car loadings, as reported by leading carriers, increased more than 40 per cent over the corresponding week of last year.

News from Spain continued to be disturbing so far as markets connected with that country were concerned, but little effect elsewhere was felt. Pesetas were supported and the market was one in name only. Sterling was sold, probably for seasonal reasons, which hepled to weaken francs and the gold currencies.

Puts and Calls.

Puts and calls are rather difficult to obtain except in the more active stocks. In most cases the spreads are fairly wide, although close markets are quoted in some of the medium-priced favorites. Puts on General Electric are only a half point down, and calls are a point up. General Motors is 2½ and 3½. Montgomery Ward is 1 and 1½, while Central is 1 and 2. Chrysler is difficult at 6½ down and 8 up. Eastman is out of the risk class with 15 points away from the market demanded for a put and 20 points away for a call. Steel is 3 and 3½. Standard Brands is a half point either side and Sperry is 1 and 1½.

Insiders.

The SEC report on May and previous months transactions in securities, as reported by insiders, has at least one more than usually interesting item. To begin with, the current bulletin of reports is supplemental to that issued July 4, and like the former covers actual sales and purchases made in many instances, many months ago. One advantage, so far as the Root Petroleum Co. is concerned, is that the reader can have the story complete to the end of May and therefore is spared the vexation of the serial story reader, who always finds himself cut off at an interesting part.

Landon's Speech.

Great interest is shown in Wall Street in the acceptance speech to be made tomorrow evening, and broadcast over the radio, by Gov. Landon. Many who are opposed to President Roosevelt whether or no hope the speech will make Gov. Landon's position clear enough and sound enough to swing to his side a large body of voters that would like to go that way if they had a little more encouragement. A "good" speech probably would inspire the stock market.

Business Tax Seen Doubled By Social Law

Cost of Measure in 1950 Is Estimated at 1.8 Billions.

New York, July 22.—A Survey of certain effects in business of Federal social security legislation made by the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"The omnibus social security act, designed to provide a greater degree of security for the Nation's workers, eventually will saddle upon business an additional tax bill almost as large as the total taxes paid in 1936.

"In 1945, according to estimates by the Treasury Department, business will be paying $1,400,000,000 in social security taxes, while the contributions from employes, again omitting and unemployment taxes to the States, will be approximately $600,000,000. In 1950 the cost to business will rise to $1,800,000,000, and to employes $900,000,000.

"These will not be the only costs under the social security act, as there is no provision in the law for raising funds to cover the expenditures for old-age assistance to the States, security for children, aid to the blind, extension of public health services and vocational rehabilitation. All funds expended under these titles will be raised through general taxation.

Consumer to Pay.

"The billions of added taxes on business will inevitably be passed along to the consumer in the form of higher prices. Thus, the cost of living will rise and the ability of the consumer to absorb the products of industry will be restricted.

"The act will have other adverse effects, the most important of which will be the effort on the part of employers to hold the number of workers, as well as wages, to minimum levels. The attempt to maintain low working forces will be especially pronounced in those States where the unemployment insurance laws grant concessions (merit ratings) to those employers with records of constant employment.

"There are a number of private pension plans which will be liquidated unless the law is amended to provide for their continuation. Under the majority of these, the workers would obtain benefits far more favorable than those under the present law.

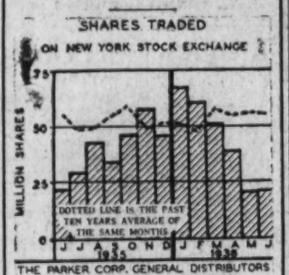
"Employes will also have cause to complain next year when their wages and salaries are reduced by the deductions which the employer must make. Coming at a time when prices will be rising to reflect the increased costs of production, the effect will be to reduce consumers' purchasing power."

Union Bag & Paper Co. To Double New Plant

New York, July 22 (AP).—Union Bag & Paper Corporation will spend $2,750,000 in enlarging its new plant at Savannah, Ga., it was announced by Merritt-Chapman & Scott Corporation, the construction firm to which the contract has been awarded.

The additions will double the capacity of the plant and bring the total spent on the plant to more than $6,500,000, the building concern said.

Trading in Stocks Over Twice Year Ago



Boston, Mass., July 22.—The stock market has recently shown some real signs of life with rails and utilities coming in for a larger proportion of sales. In spite of the small activity in May and June more than twice the number of shares were traded in the first half of this year than in the first six months of last year.

Curb Prices Dip Under Pressure

New York, July 22 (AP).—Curb market shares wallowed along in the wake of the big market today, ending with a few fair-sized losses and a generally irregular tone.

Some of the conspicuously soft spots, with declines ranging to 3 or more points, were Royal Typewriter at 62, Aluminum Co. of America at 134, Gulf Oil at 85 and Sherwin-Williams at 138.

As offsets to the generally ragged course were such gainers of a point or more as Babcock & Wilcox at 92, E. W. Bliss at 20⅞, Eureka Pipe Lines at 40, Pittsburgh Plate Glass at 126¾, Pratt & Lambert at 31¼ and Masonite at 97.

Under better support stocks like Electric Bond & Share, United Gas, American Cynamid "B," Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Creole Petroleum and Lake Shore Mines ended with moderate net gains. Sales totaled 333,000 shares, against 340,000 yesterday.

7,000,000 Catalogues Mailed by Ward Firm

Chicago, July 22.—Montgomery Ward's 1936-1937 fall and winter general catalogue, distribution of which has begun, will go to 7,000,000 families, an increase in circulation over a year ago of 1,000,000, or 16.6 per cent. The circulation of the 1936 spring and summer catalogue, sent out last January, was "more than 6,000,000."

The new book, consisting of 800 pages, is the largest since 1921, and has 46 more pages than the 1935 catalogue. It includes 376 pages of rotogravure.

World Trade Declines From Spring Peaks

Index of 75 Countries in May Was 35.8% of 1929 Average.

New York, July 22.—According to the monthly statement of the National Industrial Conference Board, world industrial production showed a moderate recession during May from the level of the preceding month. Least change was noted in Great Britain, France and Italy. Decline in Belgian steel, coal and textile industries occurred in May, a condition partly attributable to uncertainty regarding the political situation. In France, business activity showed little change during the early part of May, but during the latter part of the month and in June output was noticeably retarded by the outbreak of strikes. In Italy, industries engaged in the manufacture of military supplies showed little recession. Activity in the United Kingdom remained at a high level in the capital goods industries, although operations in many consumers' goods trades are still below capacity.

According to the National Conference Board, only the usual seasonal amount of decline was apparent in the gold value of world trade. The combined index of 75 countries (excluding Italy) stood at 35.8 per cent of the 1929 average as compared with 36.9 per cent during March, and 32.9 pe rcent in April, 1935.

The Conference Board reports world prices of foodstuffs and raw materials to have declined during May. The combined index of nine commodities stood at 67.4 per cent of the 1928 average, as compared with 68.1 per cent in April. Cotton prices were relatively unchanged; copper prices slightly higher; other commodities lower. Wheat rose sharply late in June and during the early part of July due to drought damage in producing areas of the United States and Canada.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

With leading foreign currencies under slight pressure, the position of the dollar improved in world exchange markets yesterday.

There was general heaviness in gold currencies in New York. Guilders declined .04 of a cent to 68.05 cents and Swiss francs receded .03½ of a cent. French francs were quoted at 6.62 cents, off .00½ of a cent. The Spanish peseta lost a little ground, but dealings continued on a nominal scale pending more definite word as to the economic repercussions of the political uprising. It ruled .00½ of a cent lower at 13.72 cents.

In Paris the dollar closed at the equivalent of 6.618 cents to the franc, against the overnight New York rate of 6.625 cents.

On the Air Today

Every author, producer and playwright has his pets among the works he turns out, and Shannon Allen, production boss at the Washington N. B. C. office, is no exception. Allen always has had a weakness for "Uncle Zip," which enjoyed a long and honorable life as a three-times-a-week show at WRC until suddenly stricken down last week by withdrawal of the fellow with the money bags.

But "Uncle Zip" will carry on just the same as a sustaining feature. Instead of being heard three times weekly, the proprietor of the crossroads store and his friends will be presented Thursday nights for half an hour. (WRC at 10.)

Of interest is the addition of Henry Nestor, known to Washington listeners as the "singing cop." And little Betty Allen, of the West Virginia Allens, dropped into town just at the right moment to be cast as Petunia.

For these new half-hour shows, Uncle Zip will be cast as usual with the support of the Hillbilly Swing Band, Suzabella, Benny, Gus and many others.

And as a matter of departure, the radio audience is invited to come to the studio and see the program as is goes on the air. No tickets are being issued. All you need do is appear at the studio, twelfth floor, National Press Building, at about 10:20.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

Spread in Power Strike Threatened in Mexico

Mexico City, July 22 (AP).—A wave of potential strikes affecting most of the states in the Mexican union dogged the efforts tonight of mediators attempting to end the walkout of Mexican Light & Power Co. employes.

The miners' union, 62,000 strong, protested that 18,000 of its members were without work as a result of the power stoppage caused by the walkout, which started Thursday.

Unless a settlement is effected soon, warned the union, the remaining members of the union will be called out.

Jury Gets Murder Case.

Winston-Salem, N. C., July 22 (AP). The fate of Sadie Lawson, 36-year-old tobacco factory worker, charged with fatally burning her invalid mother, Mrs. Lizzie Lawson, 63, rested in the hands of a Forsyth County jury tonight.

'Hunger Marchers' Mock Legislators

Harrisburg, July 21 (AP).—Several hundred "hunger marchers" held a mock session of the Legislature in the rotunda of the capitol tonight in protest of the Assembly's failure to prevent break-down of unemployment relief.

Food orders and cash will be shut off at midnight because of a lack of funds.

The marchers announced their first bill would "appropriate $100,000,000 for relief." They declared they would remain in the rotunda all night and "tomorrow night we'll put cots on the State House lawn.

Aid Sent to Firefighters.

Newberry, Mich., July 22 (AP).—A trainload of men and equipment was rushed to the aid of CCC workers and volunteers today when a forest fire along the Tahquamenon River swept across a mile strip of green timber and spread into the Lake Betsy region.

The break of the Tahquamenon fire, which had been held in check by 1,000 workers, brought fresh troubles to conservation department officials. The Lake Betsy area, wild and almost inaccessible, is highly inflammable.

Trousers Autographed.

Albany, N. Y., July 22 (U.P.).—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman and Mayor John Boyd Thatcher of Albany autographed the seat of a boy's white trousers shortly before today's charter celebration parade started. The boy said he wasn't going to wear the trousers anymore.
